Herd buyout participation greater than anticipated

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

WASHINGTON — Reports from throughout the country indicate dairy farmers participated in the controversial herd buyout plan in a varied and vigorous fashion.

Although formal reports will not be available for several weeks, USDA officials indicated bidding activity was greater than they expected — and the range of bids was "staggering."

"Participation was much higher than anticipated," indicated one ASCS official who asked not to be identified. "It was twice what we needed, from all reports."

Bid totals, he said, ranged from a low of $1.96 a hundredweight to $350, with the greatest activity in the $20 to $40 range.

"We're just encouraged that dairy farmers participated so strongly," the official said. He indicated that the department felt the positive response was a vote of confidence for the program.

Reports from throughout the region indicated that participation was surprisingly high in many areas — approaching 20 percent in some cases.

Statewide participation was 19.4 percent in New York, with bids ranging from less than $10 to a high of $225. And in Delaware, participation averaged about 13.4 percent.

In Pennsylvania, ASCS officials declined to provide figures, but indicated participation was higher than in the dairy diversion program which ended in March 1985. The Keystone State had 1,221 participants in the earlier production-control program.

Bids will be submitted to the Commodity Credit Corp. office in Kansas City, where they will be tabulated and evaluated. Dairymen whose bids are being accepted will be notified over the next several weeks.

Producers had until March 7 to enter a bid in the producer-funded Herd Termination Program, as the buyout is formally titled.

Passed as a Farm Bill compromise negotiated late last year in the U.S. Congress, the buyout is designed to permanently remove up to 12 billion pounds of dairy production capacity.

Funded by a 40-cent assessment on producers, the program pays participants to sell off their dairy animals for export or slaughter and keep their facilities out of dairy production for five years.

The buyout purchases are to occur in three separate time periods over the next 18 months, to lessen the impact of the program on the meat industry.

Experts indicate that the length of time involved effectively discourages herd buyout participants from returning to the industry in five years. Nothing bars "buyout" dairymen from engaging in other non-dairy agricultural enterprises, however.

Assessment to replace Gramm-Rudman cut

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has indicated that he will sign a package of revisions to the 1985 Farm Bill, including a provision substituting a 12-cent dairy assessment for a 55-cent reduction in support price.

The measure, passed by the Congress late last week, is the dairy industry's response to the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-cutting measure. The Gramm-Rudman cuts, which went into effect March 1, would have pared 55 cents per hundredweight from the price the Commodity Credit Corporation pays to purchase surplus dairy products.

Those reductions would have been in addition to a 40-cent assessment to be levied on producers beginning April 1, to fund the new herd buyout program.

The dairy industry proposed the assessment, since it would be distributed across all the milk produced in the country, not just the 10 percent of production sold in surplus to the CCC. The CCC purchase price pays an important role in setting dairy prices across the country, and the reductions required by Gramm-Rudman eventually would have reduced

Watching as the bids are opened

YORK — All that was missing was the batch of little, white ping-pong balls with numbers on them, bouncing around in a see-through container.

With that exception, the Monday afternoon opening of York County's dairy herd buyout bids assumed a sort of lottery flavor. About half the audience held potential "winners," or contract bids, while the remainder were merely on hand as interested spectators.

When all the envelopes had been opened, contracts unfolded and second bids overruled earlier ones in cases where bidders had reassessed figures before the deadline, a total of 37 dairy families had played their hand in the buyout game.

Low bid in York County was $10, for participation in the first buyout period, to begin April 1 and run through August 31. High bid was $80, and was for the third period of the buyout, March 1 through August 31 of 1987.

The 37 individual bidders put in 96 separate bids, most bidding a figure for each of the three buyout periods. A few, however, bid into only one or two of the three periods.

Of the total 96 bids, 25 were in the $40-$50 range. Second high group was in the $20-$30 range, with a total of 21 bids. Another 20 bids came in the $30-$40 range. And, there were 15 bids each in both the $10-$20 range, and for $50 and over.

There were a few cases of the same bid price across the board, for all three buyout periods. A few others ranged as much as $20 difference from one bid period to another. Most however, ranged a few dollars from one period to another, apparently dependent on a bidder's personal preferred time to exit the dairy business, if selected.

A local accounting specialist on hand to hear the price bids privately ventured a guess that perhaps five to nine of the bids might win consideration.

The number of participants, according to York ASCS office head Peggyann Carnill, was about what had been expected. Most apparently pondered the issue, and "crunched" numbers right up until the Friday, March 7, deadline.

"We had 28 come in on Friday," she affirmed. "It was really busy."

Bidders will know March 28 how they can begin planning their future.

According to Ms. Carnill, the bids opened Monday were forwarded to Kansas City for nationwide tabulation. From there, numbers compilations go to Washington, D.C. for final consideration and selection by newly-confirmed Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng. Announcement of selected bids is to come March 27, with letters going out to producers the following day.

One dairymen, on hand to hear the bids, matter-of-factly shrugged his shoulders and grinned as ASCS chairman Richard Deardorff announced the final bid figure.

"Look's like I'm still in production; my bid was too high. Now I'm going home and build a silo."

Wednesday, Mar. 12, 1986

Market Comment: Prices continued under downward pressure. Offerings were fully sufficient and plant schedules were full. Canner demand was fairly good but unable to keep product well-cleared, and some product was moving into storage for later needs. The undertone was unsettled and barely steady.

Philadelphia Eggs

Thursday, March 13, 1986
Report Supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices continued to work higher under active inquiry for gradable stocks. However, resistance was developing in some quarters where packers were content to work with current receipts and buy more if the need arose later. Cartoned egg demand was irregular but moderate for the most part, and orders were increasing in spots. Graded supplies were in-balance to short and confidently held on the large and extra large sizes; mediums were generally more available. Additional extra large sizes; mediums were generally more available. Additional retail featuring was planned for next week mainly on large and in some instances, mediums.

Prices to retailers: sales to volume buyers, consumer grades white eggs in cartons delivered store door:

A Extra Large .72-.85; A Large .70-.83; A Medium .60-.67.

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, Mar. 13, 1986

Market Comment: The call for ready to cook whole birds was slow, and premiums were being altered to effect satisfactory clearances in some quarters. Demand for parts was good for tight supplies of cutlets and breast meat. Wings continued to clear well while the overall call on leg meat was insufficient to keep stocks from building.

Live supplies were adequate to fully adequate. Weights were desirable to lighter than desired, and some plants were trimming operations as a result.

Slaughter schedules were moderate. The undertone was barely steady.

Today's L.T.L. asking prices were generally unchanged on U.S. Grade A at .50-.58 cents, however, some lots are negotiable.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva (000).

Estimated 3/13 1,856,000; Actual 3/06 1,862,000.

Actual 3/11 1,941,000; Average Weights 3/11 4.24.

WE WORK FOR THE FARMER!

PENNSYLVANIA TOBACCO AUCTION, INC.

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

We Thank All Farmers And All Buyers For Supporting Our New Tobacco Marketing Method In Pennsylvania:

AUCTION!

It is our opinion that your support of the auction, and your strength in numbers to hold your Type 609 tobacco until the auction opened, brought the market prices of your Type 609 tobacco to acceptable market prices. It is our opinion that the Type 41 tobacco market prices were acceptable on TOP quality Type 41 tobacco.

It is up to you farmers to decide what to plant next year!

We feel that demand will be here for Type 609 tobacco; however, it is important to remember that demand is strongest in December and January and quality will be very important. We feel that demand will continue to exist for Type 609 largely due to lower support prices in the Burley markets. We also feel that there will continue to be a demand for local Type 41 tobacco. Quality again will be very important. Hopefully we have stimulated more demand for this type of leaf through the work of various southern buyers.

We have already begun to prepare for next years tobacco marketing season. We will do everything we can this year to create more demand in our locally grown tobacco leaf. We will also be working and supporting various publications in Lancaster Farming providing information on planting, growing, harvesting, & marketing your tobacco.

We will continue to have phone hours to answer any questions you may have on Tuesdays & Wednesdays from 1 to 5 p.m.

Please refer to auction news in Lancaster Farming for the seasons averages.

Budgets and extension

News stories over the past few weeks have explained how the Gramm-Rudman tax cuts would affect Agricultural Extension Services. And the news has certainly been bad.

At first, the extension programs were going to be cut entirely. Even now, wholesale reductions in staff and services are being discussed, with 4-H and family living programs a prime target.

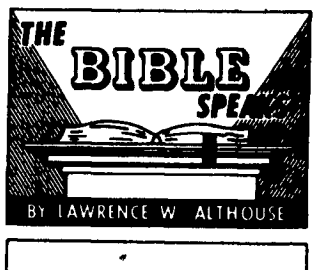
In an era of budgetary limitation, the extension services can hardly expect to be viewed as a sacred cow. Cuts will be made, and new realities will have to be recognized.

But extension services have proved their worth year after year, in the help, advice, counseling and personal services they provide to farmers and rural residents alike. Cutting many of these programs now, in one of agriculture's lowest moments, would truly be short-sighted.

Perhaps states can and should assume a greater burden. After all, federal funds guarantee an adequate food supply through purchase of surplus commodities and other programs to maintain prices. Shouldn't the states assume greater responsibility for the aid and development of the agricultural businesses within their borders?

Decisions about what programs to fund — and how to fund them — are political decisions, decisions that will be made in the heat of the coming political campaign.

Farmers have every right to participate in that process, making suggestions about what programs could be cut . . . and which ones have proved their worth. And they have a responsibility to their industry to fight for the programs they think are absolutely essential.



COUNTING GOD'S SLOWNESS

March 16, 1986

Background Scripture:
2 Peter.

Devotional Reading:
2 Peter 1:3-11.

A few months ago I was privileged to hear a lecture on cosmology by Dr. Robert Jastrow, now of Dartmouth College but internationally known for his work in the space exploration program of NASA. Speaking to the Isthmus Institute, an organization that explores the convergences of science and religion, Dr. Jastrow fascinated us by reminding us that the balance of forces and elements in the creation of this universe is so intricate and finely-tuned that a seemingly significant change in that balance would have created a universe quite different from the one in which we live.

15 BILLION YEARS

Dr. Jastrow said that, "if the strength of the nuclear force is decreased by about one percent, nuclear reactions would take place so slowly in the universe that none of the elements on which life depends—carbon, nitrogen, oxygen, and so on—could be formed in the 15 billion years' since creation. So, the slightest change in the balance of forces would have resulted in a universe without any life whatsoever. And it is difficult to conceive of that delicate balance coming into being by accident or without a Creator.

The other idea with which Dr. Jastrow boggled my mind was to remind me that, if the creation took place 15 billion years ago—as science generally assumes—the time span of human life on this earth is but a flyspeck in the total expanse of time science creation and our civilization, our own era and lifetime are utterly invisible on the universe's timeline. Thus, when the writer of 2 Peter says, "with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (3:8), he is probably even understanding the difference between time as we see it and as God views it.

AS SOME COUNT IT

So, it may seem such a very long time since God gave us his promise of "new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells" (3:13), but that is only because our sense of time is so short term when viewed in the broad expanse of the universe. It is because of this, then, that he can say to us. "The Lord is not slow about his promise as some count slowness..." (3:9). That's the problem right there!—not that God is slow, but that we "count time" strictly from our very limited human perspective.

As I write these lines, the problems facing the world today seem overwhelming: violence, terrorism, crime, corruption, the nuclear arms race and so forth. But this is my 56th year and I can recall that each year of my brief span has had its share of alarms and crises and I can hardly remember what it was 10, 20, 30, 40 years ago that seemed so earth-threatening.

The God who created this universe 15 billion years ago still is in charge of where creation has been and where it is going. And if he seems slow, the problem is with our sense of time, not his.

To Practice Safety Around Liquid Manure Pits

Many manure pits will be cleaned out at this time of year for field application. This by-product of the livestock and dairy business is very useful as fertilizer. However, the pit can be a safety hazard because of poisonous and explosive gases.

When the mixture is agitated in order to be removed, these gases are more plentiful and much more dangerous. Good ventilation above the pit is very important. Also, anyone who goes down in the empty pit should be wearing a gas mask. These gases are dangerous and can be fatal to both humans and animals. We urge all farmers to caution their employees of this potential danger.

To Control Wild Garlic

We may like onions on our hamburgers and in other foods, but very few of us like onion-flavored milk. This can easily happen on dairy farms where wild garlic plants are allowed to grow. Many pastures are infested with wild garlic.

One of the best times to start control measures on this weed is early spring when the young plants are 4 to 8 inches high. An application of 2,4D will knock them down. Follow the label for directions. When this is applied around the middle to latter part of March, little damage is done to any legume in the area. If garlic plants are allowed to mature each year, the pasture area will become so contaminated that dairy cows cannot utilize the grass.

To Care For Horses

Many horses and ponies are neglected this time of year. When they are kept in a stable for long periods of time...such as during the winter...they can get out of condition. And they may develop some bad habits. But you can avoid this by following good management practices.

Your horses are natural athletes and need a daily workout to keep their muscles, feet and legs in good condition. Twenty to twenty-five minutes on the end of a long line is one of the best ways. Just let the horse run circles around you. This keeps him from getting fat and developing weak feet and legs.

Don't feed moldy, dusty or dirty hay or grain to horses; this could result in respiratory problems. Free choice of clean water, salt and minerals should be provided. Good care now will help bring good performance during the rest of the year.

To Control Mice In Orchards

Now that the winter is almost gone, our fruit growers should take a look at the newly-exposed grass sod in their orchards. If there are runways at the surface of the grass, it is a good sign that there are plenty of mice in the orchard even though a mouse baiting program may have been followed last fall.

The mice have used up their stockpiles of stored food and are now looking for a fresh supply. At this time of the year they will move quickly onto bark and roots of fruit trees.

Fruit growers should re-bait their orchards as soon as possible if there are fresh mouse signs.

For growers who put out bait stations in the orchard last fall, it will be a simple matter of replenishing the rodenticide-treated bait under all of the stations. You must remember that the mice are hungry and can do a lot of damage to fruit trees between now and the time that other plants start to grow in the spring.

Cimarron Alfalfa
Proven Performance

Premium alfalfa seed is an important part of any high-yielding, high-quality alfalfa program.

That's why more and more growers are planting CIMARRON Alfalfa. CIMARRON is a consistent top producer, both on the farm and in university tests — not only in total yield but in crude protein content and TDN. It's an extra leafy/full season variety with excellent stand persistence.

CIMARRON Alfalfa exhibits outstanding resistance to a broad spectrum of diseases and insects such as Phytophthora root rot, bacterial wilt, Fusarium wilt, anthracnose, Sclerotinia crown and stem rot, Stemphylium leaf spot, common leaf spot, pea aphids, spotted alfalfa aphids and the alfalfa weevil. No other variety can match CIMARRON'S combined pest resistance.

Depend on the proven performance of CIMARRON Alfalfa.

Plant T1100. The standard of comparison.

You could have taken a chance with an unknown corn hybrid this spring. One of those new hybrids that's supposed to be "even better" than DEKALB-PFIZER's T1100. But you know how T1100 performs.

T1100 handles stress, no matter what the season has in store. And it stands strong all the way to harvest, so you can put those extra bushels in the bin. T1100's a proven performer. No doubt about it. And that's what you want from your corn hybrid. Don't take a chance you don't have to take. Plant the standard of comparison. Plant T1100.

Start every day feeling good... with the best from Funk.

Come next summer, you'll know you've made a wise management decision. You'll be growing hybrids with a reputation for delivering what farmers want – consistent high yields.

That's exactly what you can expect from these hybrids.

New G-4326. Strong overall performance puts this 100-105 hybrid in the must-plant category for many farmers. It offers competitive yields for its early maturity along with strong stalks and easy harvesting.

New G-4440. Several years of testing prove G-4440 can yield right up at the top of its 110 day class. It's been delivering this high performance in our test plots in southern Pennsylvania as well as the Corn Belt. Big, showy ears on fast-growing plants make it a roadside eye catcher.

G-4594. Wide adaptability and performance under heat and drought make G-4594 a wise addition to anyone's corn program. You'll really like its large, girthy ears...and the way it stands tough through harvesting.

Three of the best. There's no better way to start every day.

Shady Birch Farm: well grounded in soil conservation

BY JACK HUBLEY

BUCK — Pennsylvania's rivers and streams are a bargain-basement delivery service, shipping, on the average, nearly eight tons of topsoil from every acre of Keystone State cropland annually–and doing it free of charge. But farmers who continue to donate to this soil movement by floating their farms down the river may eventually find themselves up the creek.

Although estimating the value of a ton of topsoil isn't as easy as computing the value of an acre of shelled corn, the fact is that landscapers are getting about $10 a ton for the stuff, delivered. And that figure fails to take into account the expensive fertilizers, herbicides and insecticides that are also lost when another ton of soil washes down-stream.

Southern Lancaster County farmer James G. Kreider was one of the first farmers in his area to recognize the economic importance of keeping his soil on the farm. In recognition of his soil conservation efforts, the Lancaster County Conservation District will honor Kreider with its Cooperator of the Year award at the District's annual dinner meeting on Mar. 21.

Jim Kreider and his son Tom, 29, run Shady Birch Farm, a dairy and crop operation located in East Drumore Township not far from the town of Buck. The operation is actually made up of three farms totally 300 acres, with an additional 100 acres of rented ground.

Jim's roots run deep in Shady Birch soil, which is undoubtedly one reason why keeping his topsoil intact is so important to him. Born in the home farmhouse, Jim bought the farm from his father in 1953. In 1974, Tom joined his father in business, following graduation from Solanco High School.

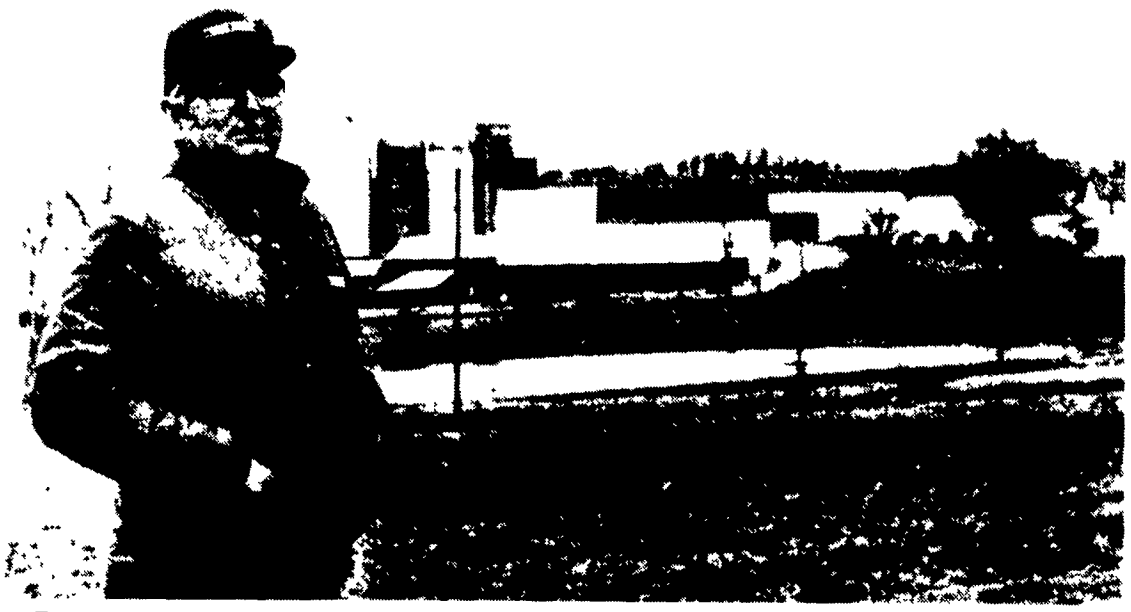
Since neither father nor son was interested in milking cows, the family struck an agreement with George Nickle, who owns half of the 155-cow milking herd and assumes total responsibility for the dairy operation. Tom is content to handle the mechanical and maintenance end of the business, because, as he points out, "Equipment doesn't talk back."

Although Jim's working relationship with the Conservation District and the Soil Conservation Service dates to 1966, it wasn't until Tom's graduation year, in 1974, that the face of Shady Birch Farm really began to change. At that time, Jim signed a Long Term Agreement with the District and SCS, which entitled him to up to $3,500 in cost-share benefits annually.

Although the project would entail extensive earth moving as well as out-of-pocket expense, Kreider knew he'd be paid back with interest in the form of long-term yield benefits. Much of his high quality Chester-type soil was located on a 6 to 8-percent slope, and, with no contour strips or terraces to arrest the flow of runoff, the foundation of Kreider's livelihood was being literally liquidated by heavy spring and fall rains.

The Lancaster Soil Conservation Service office estimates that Kreider's cropland was disappearing at an average rate of 20 to 24 tons per acre annually. With the maximum sustainable loss generally considered to be about three tons, Shady Birch's erosion problem was serious enough to warrant a major restructuring of the farm's cropland.

With technical assistance provided by SCS, 11,500 feet of cropland terraces were installed, along with 8,200 feet of sod diversion terraces to divert water away from areas vulnerable to erosion. To handle the flow from the terraces, 6,450 feet of sod waterways were built. In addition, nearly 5,000 feet of drainage tile was installed to drain land saturated by spring seeps and make it available to crop production.



For his efforts to keep topsoil on the farm, James Kreider has been named the Lancaster County Conservation District's Outstanding Cooperator for 1986.

By 1980 the farm's look had changed significantly. "Before, we had all straight rows in 100-foot strips," says Jim, adding that some of those strips were plowed in the same direction as the flow of runoff, resulting in considerable soil loss from heavy rains.

To augment these soil saving practices, the Kreiders switched to minimum tillage in the mid-1970's. "We were one of the first in the area to start that, and a lot of guys laughed," recalls Tom. "But with the right planter, it (conservation tillage) grows the same amount of corn."

Since putting away their moldboard plow, the Kreiders chisel in the spring, then go over the fields with a disk once or twice before planting. In the fall, the stalks are disked down after the corn is shelled.

"When I was younger than Tom, we used to plow all spring," says Jim, adding that the switch to minimum tillage results in savings in both manpower and equipment.

Although their fields may not appear as well manicured at planting time, Tom points out that the rougher soil surface helps to hold the water. "You work the ground to death, then you get a downpour and it's gone."

Another tool effective in containing soil during a downpour is the roadside buffer strip. Since much of their road frontage is vulnerable to washing during heavy rains, the Kreiders seed these areas with rye. The rye performs double duty, keeping topsoil intact during the fall, winter and early spring, and being harvested for silage before these areas are replaced with corn.

Managing the farm's manure output efficiently is just as important as soil and water conservation to the Kreiders. In 1966, Jim installed a 35,000-gallon manure storage tank, one of the first in the area. Since this small amount of storage space necessitated mid-winter hauling, the Kreiders installed a larger unit in the early 1980's. Measuring 12 feet deep by 84 feet in diameter, the concrete tank has a 450,000-gallon capacity, providing six months of storage.

Manure from the dairy herd is initially scraped into the smaller tank beside the barn, then pumped underground for a distance of about 150 feet to the larger unit. By pumping the manure into the bottom of the large tank, the crust on top of the slurry is not disturbed. This keeps the nitrogen contained within the tank, says Tom.

With their new manure holding facilities, the Kreiders haul manure only twice a year, once before corn planting time, and again after silo filling. In order to keep the maximum amount of nutrients on the farm, the manure is injected into the soil or chiseled as soon as possible. "We've really helped our fertilizer requirements since we went to injecting the liquid," Tom notes.

According to Jim, nearly all of the farm's soil, water and nutrient management systems have proven to be virtually maintenance free. Since the sod waterways are called upon to handle large quantities of cropland runoff on occasion, some maintenance is required when minor washouts occur, but, with a little extra care when working the soil at planting time, the cropland terraces should remain in place indefinitely. Once you do it, it's always there," Tom points out.

SCS District Conservationist Warren Archibald concurs that many of the country's old terraces, installed during the 1930's, are still in place and performing well.

Cropland terraces, diversion terraces, sod waterways and manure management systems: assembled into an integrated program, these practices can save soil, water, nutrients...and money Like the value of an acre of topsoil, the exact figures can prove to be elusive. But Jim Kreider is one innovative farmer who's convinced that the economic return is very real. "I wouldn't want to go back to the way it was before...no way," he smiles.

With minimal maintenance, sod waterways remain effective barriers to soil erosion during periods of heavy rain.

Surplus, consolidation, prices, production control...

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

LANCASTER — Adjustments, mergers, regionalization, fewer cows in fewer herds, a lower market value for milk, but an overall positive long run picture were some of the predictions for the future by a panel at the Lancaster Dairy Day.

These panelist were addressing the topic, "Our future, where are we going and how do we adjust."

The panel members were: Robert Dever, assistant general manager of Inter-State Milk Producers; Stephen Graybeal, a dairyman from Peach Bottom; Gordon Hoover, a dairyman from Gap; Robert Kindig, president of Pennsylvania DHIA and a dairyman from Conestoga; and Daniel Martin, vice-president of Inter-State and a dairyman from Manheim.

Dever explained that we will be seeing more consolidation on both the processing and prodution ends. He went on stating there would be very strong processing and farm related organizations in the future.

This will be a change, he continued, as the industry is "heading towards a limited number people being involved in the business."

Martin commented on that the increasing number of non-farm businesses becoming involved in the dairy field is a positive move. Dever supported this view explaining, "large food oriented organizations will be able to bring new innovations in marketing to the dairy industry."

The power of the cooperatives was another point which all members of the panel agreed upon.

Graybeal commented that "Cooperatives have a responsibility to return the assessment through better markets and a better price for the product."

Hoover, while commenting that he is relatively new to dairying, feels that the cooperatives have the power to make needed changes. "NMPF, a collection of cooperatives, was partially responsible for the new dairy bill." This bill, Hoover feels is a good one.

Cooperation among all farm organizations, and working together is a trend that is developing, Dever noted. He further explained that this cooperation is a must for the future, in developing farm policy and other concerns for the farmers.

Kindig noted this cooperation is evident in DHIA on a national level. They are working to reduce certain costs, such as that of developing software programs, by spreading them out over a greater area. He also noted that everything is not compatible nationwide and there will be regionalization.

Explaining that these difference exist and the barriers are too difficult to hurdle, Dever affirmed the increase in regionalization. He continued that it will always be the northeast versus the south versus the midwest versus the west.

The panel was asked by moderator Glenn Shirk their feelings on how price could be enhanced.

Dever noted that "Until we can get a better handle on the supply and demand, price will not go up."

Kindig explained that DHIA expects the price of milk to drop even further and has been encouraging the producers to find ways of reducing costs in order to stay in business.

The consumers want cheap food, Martin explained, and the only way to achieve this is to have more food than the market needs. The government invented the price support to achieve cheap food.

He continued that the support price allows the production overrun and provides a little profit for the producer. While he agreed that as long as milk was being produced in surpluses, prices would not be raised. He also pointed out the support program worked well until the last few years when the level rose too high. Martin feels this program will work well again once we get it back in line.

Martin suggested a supply management program is needed to maintain this cheap food supply and at reasonable profit for farmers.

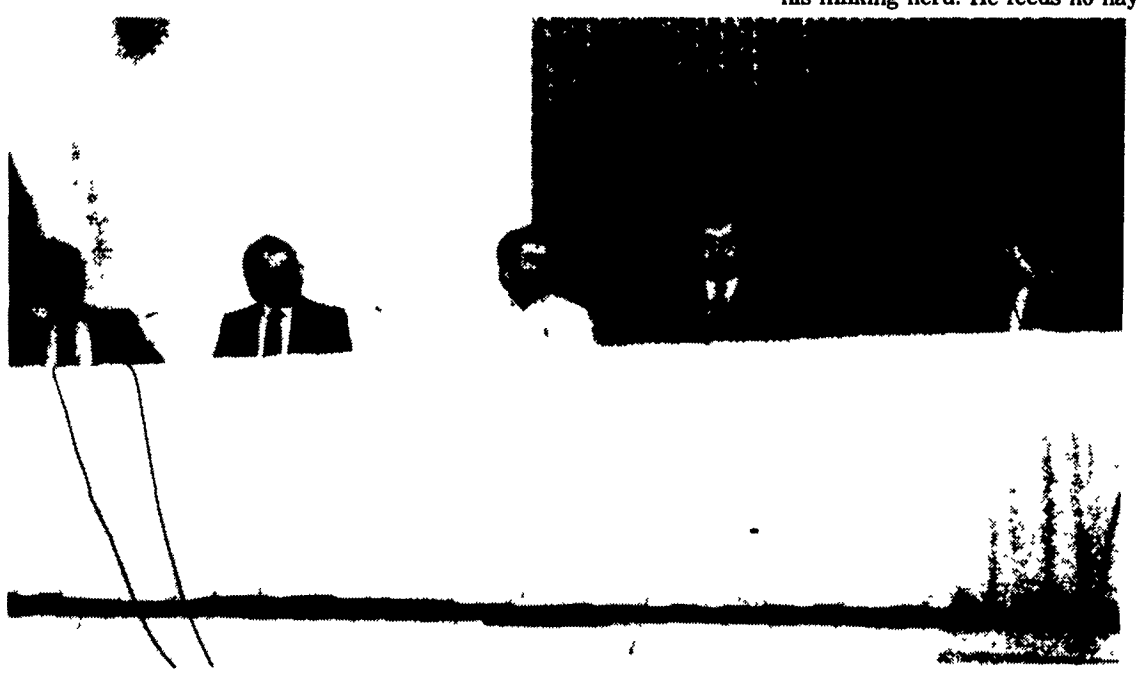
Graybeal however disagreed because he feels that quotas maintain the status quo and resembles central planning. It is his feeling that down the road this will encounter disaster when the markets and supplies change.

Dever noted that at the meetings he attended, he got the impression that farmers do not want a quota system.

This panel was the second of two panel discussions on the agenda. The morning's panel focused on the topic of herd management.

This panel included: Dale Hershey, Manheim; Timothy Kissling, Robesonia; Glenn Burkholder, Washington Boro; and Nelson Wenger, Manheim.

Kissling stated that the basis for his feeding program are forages. He feeds good forages to his heifers and uses a total mixed ration for his milking herd. He feeds no hay



The dairy herd management panelists were, left, Dale Hershey, Tim Kissling, Glenn Burkholder and Nelson Wenger, Glenn Shirk, extension agent, moderated this discussion.

Dairy's future the topic at Lancaster's Dairy Days since he feels it is an inefficient way to get the same high quality as haylage.

Wenger explained that he cuts his haylage coarse in order to keep his fat test up. He also pointed out that by maintaining the fertilization of a field, the protein and yield levels were also maintained.

Since he feeds all of his forage in the form of hay, Hershey noted that by using a preservative he was able to make quality forage at different moisture levels. He also stated that by using preservative on his high moisture ground ear corn, it developed less heat damage in his conventional silo.

Hershey explained that all the cows in his barn wear colored tags which correspond to the amount of grain they receive. All of his cows are fed in a stanchion barn setup.

Presently, Hershey said, he and his brother are milking and feeding three times a day. One of their concerns is feeding too high of a level of energy. They are able to avoid this by feeding hay six times a day compared to grain which is fed three times daily.

Kissling explained that his cows are separated into a high and a low group. He feeds with a TMR system twice a day. This ration is balanced to production and body weight.

Burkholder noted that he is usually the only feeder. Since he knows his cows, he is able to feed according to their production needs.

Emphasizing the need for good quality forages, Wenger stated that he attempts to keep energy levels up and protein down. He pointed out he only groups his herd into dry or milking cows.

Kisslinger urged the group use a balanced feeding program and get the highest level of production possible from that feed. He explained that one has to work hard at little things at times to make the whole feeding program work.

All of these panelists agreed that top production doesn't always insure top dollar return.

Dr. James Ferguson, VMD, New Bolton Center, explained the relationship between nutrition and reproduction.

The diet is important, Ferguson noted, since an adequate amount of protein is necessary to get a cow to consume enough dry matter. Dry matter intake, he continued is directly related to energy consumption. An insufficient level of energy in the diet can cause many health and reproductive related problems, he added.

Ferguson pointed out that while a protein level of 18 to 20 percent is optimum level for maximum milk production, it is also the level where problem develop reproductively. Cows receiving this level of protein have a harder time settling, Ferguson explained.

He said the reason for this is that feeds with this protein level are using a highly degradeable source, such as urea. Most of this protein, he continued, breaks down in the rumen. The cow then has problems converting this protein to utilizable form of microbial protein.

Ammonia, which is highly toxic, then increases and is absorbed through the rumen walls Ferguson said. To prevent toxicity, the body channels this ammonia to the liver where it is converted to urea, Ferguson continued. This urea then either recycled back to the rumen or it is excreted. Basically, Ferguson noted, this serves to waste energy and protein.

James D. Ferguson

Factors influencing the urea levels of the blood include protein and energy levels of the ration, and rumen degradability of protein Ferguson pointed out. He also explained that as the urea levels increased, conception level decreased.

He suggested this was an area that could be investigated when no other reasons for reproduction problems could be found.

Mineral deficiencies such as phosphorus, can also cause reproductive problems, Ferguson explained. He noted that the phosphorus calcium ratio was unrelated to reproduction as long as the phosphorus level was no less than four milligrams.

Ferguson concluded by stating there were three things that must be done on a farm twice every day, milking, feeding, and checking for heats. He explained that there were no substitutes for checking heat at least two times every day.

Stephen Graybeal, left, Robert Kindig, Robert Dever, Gordon Hoover and Daniel Martin made up the panel for the discussion on the future and how we adjust to it.

Lehigh directors questioned closely on API sale

LANCASTER — Despite reporting an unaudited net margin of $2.68 million, Lehigh Valley farmers elected and appointed officials found themselves defending the sale of assets of an auxiliary organization at their sixth annual meeting here Wednesday.

The focus of the 20 minute question-and-answer period was Atlantic Processing, Inc. (API), a federation of dairy cooperatives — Lehigh, Dairylea, Mr. Joy, Cumberland Valley and Capitol Milk.

Effective February 28, the API Board of Directors sold the organization's assets, the "bricks and mortar," to John Labatt, a Canadian food conglomerate, Lehigh President Alpheus Ruth told the 700 assembled farmer-owners and guests. Labatt recently purchased Johanna Farms, a New Jersey-based dairy processor with markets for citrus and other juices, milk and yogurt throughout the Northeast.

According to management consultant James Compton, the assets were sold "at book value," estimated at $17 million after intense farmer questioning. The ice cream, cultured products and fluid processing plants are now operating a Lehigh Valley Dairies, Inc., a subsidiary of Johanna. Johanna.

Compton estimated that the average Lehigh farmer, producing 700,000 pounds per year, would reap $8,893 over a five-year-period, should the API board approve the revolving capital plan outlined to the farmer-owners Wednesday.

This figure includes five-year savings resulting from eliminating the 10-cent capital retain ($3,500), repayment of past capital retains over a three-year period ($3,866) and five years of estimated dividends from API operations ($1,527).

However, farmers must have a minimum level of equity before they can discontinue their 10-cent capital retain.

Regardless of the financial picture presented, some member-owners continued to question the decision. One farmer said that Lehigh farmer-owners are "no longer responsible for what we are producing. We have become, in a sense, one more milk pooler." The comment was greeted with scattered applause.

Ruth, a Fleetwood dairy farmer, responded that the board felt it should "return to the producer the most dollars and cents," commenting that pride in owning bricks and motar is not enough.

Ruth said the sale was unanimously approved by the API Board, of which he is the chairman. Moreover, he explained that API would not be dessolved. Instead, its staff will be trimmed to four people, with new manager Roy Seifert.

API remains a federation of dairy cooperatives with long-term supply contracts with Johanna and Beatrice Foods, which owns the Allentown-based cheese plant once a part of API, Ruth said.

API has a six-year contract with Beatrice to supply 33 million pounds of raw milk per month, with a provision for shipping more when necessary for balancing supplies, Compton said. The 10-year contract with Johanna-Labatt's is 70 million pounds per month.

Ruth said that he hoped "not too many Lehigh Valley Farmers leave dairying (a reference to the whole-herd buy-out) because Lehigh needs more milk." He reminded producers that more milk shipped equals more equity in API.

In justifying the sale to Labatt's Ruth said the Canadian firm has sales of $3 billion, 11,000 employees, and 63 manufacturing and processing facilities. They are the world's largest grain processor, he said, and Canada's leading dairy company.

"I don't think we should be excited that they also own a brewing company," he said, noting that one of the first questions he heard was just that. "The important thing is they are a diversified company that happens to own a brewing company. They don't have all their eggs in one basket."

Ruth alluded to the loss of a major customer in early 1985, an unfavorable labor relations decision and the proposed expansion of Federal Orders 2 and 4 as factors influencing the decision to sell.

The labor relations problem dealt with truck drivers at the Lansdale plant, he said. An effort to trim labor costs backfired with the arbitrator's decision to reinstate the $40,000 per year drivers and award back pay, Ruth said.

"The main objective of the Federal Order expansion was to capture API's Schulykill-Haven plant's profits," he said. The expansion would cost API $2 million a year, he said.

General Manager William Stout said the expansion is "in a holding pattern." After November's injunction, briefs were scheduled to be filed by March 1. A decision should be reached by summer, he said.

What position will Johanna take now that it owns the facility? The question was not asked, but the answer could be interesting, as Johanna has supported order expansion.

Treasurer Robert Gehman presented the unaudited financial statements, highlighting the $2.68 million in net margin. The 954 million pounds of Lehigh milk is comparable to 10 percent of the total Pennsylvania production.

Stout thanked the farmers who had voluntarily earmarked six cents per hundredweight for Lehigh Valley Farmers branded products, noting that the brand advertising program has now been discontinued.

James Compton

A series of district meetings will be held in the next two weeks to report to farmers who were unable to attend Wednesday's session, according to a news release distributed at the meeting.

LANCASTER — Lehigh Valley Farmers marketed 954 million pounds of milk in fiscal 1986, an increase of 8.6 percent over fiscal 1985, General Manager William M. Stout told producers and guests at the cooperative's sixth annual meeting here Wednesday.

Tying his remarks around the theme "New Horizons," Stout said that Lehigh farmer-owners received $768,000 in quality premiums in fiscal 1986 and another $340,000 in other bonus payments. In the last five years, producers have received $4 million in premiums and bonuses, he said.

Patronage is being returned this year on a cash and certificate basis: cash at 3.6 cents and certificates at 14.4 cents per hundredweight. Member equity certificates total $5,631,559 for a six-year period.

Stout attributed the good year partially to a two percent decrease in operating costs. He commented that the effort to obtain over-order pricing through the Regional Cooperative Marketing Association (RCMA) has been stymied because "independent farmers are slow to participate."

Treasurer Robert R. Gehman presented the unaudited financials, which showed a net margin of $2.68 million. He reported that Lehigh Valley Farmers owns 73 percent of the assets of Atlantic Processing, Inc. (API), totalling $9,984,000 in equity.

Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Richard Grubb was the guest speaker at the annual luncheon, held in the Cabaret Room of the Host Farm in Lancaster. In an optimistic address, Grubb applauded the "more market-oriented" approach of the 1985 Farm Bill and predicted that land prices have bottomed out.

In admitting that all is not roses, he said, "The debt load of the average Pennsylvania farmer is significantly lower than that of those in neighboring states. However, cash flow is a problem for many Pennsylvania farmers."

"It doesn't take an economist to compare" the prices paid and prices received by farmers to realize that there is a problem, he said, however. From 1977-84, prices paid by farmers increased 64 percent; prices received increased 27 percent.

He reminded the audience that since 1980, agriculture has been the leading economic sector of the Commonwealth, led in part by the state's fifth ranking in dairy, first ranking in mushrooms, and third ranking in egg production.

He closed with a plug for Penn State's first "Future In Agriculture" conference slated for March 19-20 at the Harrisburg Holiday Inn.

Also at the luncheon, President Alpheus Ruth recognized District 7 director Earl Reighard, who has sold his farm and retired from the board after nine years of service. He has been replaced by Robert Nearhoof, Sr. of Hundingdon County.

At the close of the afternoon session, several Lehigh farmer-owners were recognized for producing quality milk.

Milk scare can be a lesson

BY KATHY E. GILL
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — National Milk Producers Federation staff member John Adams suggested the current milk contamination and scare in Arkansas and bordering states be a lesson to dairy farmers across the country.

"You must learn to be aware of what you are purchasing, whether it is feed or seed. You need some assurance that the product is free of contaminants. If you cannot get such an assurance, then don't buy the product," he admonished.

Adams' comments were in reference to a nationally-breaking news story which told of 60 plus dairy farms which have been affected by a contamination with heptachlor.

The affected farmers apparently purchased mash from a gasahol plant, Adams said. The plant's owner had processed seed corn and other distressed corn, some of which had been treated. The chemical was present in the mash and was passed on through the food chain to the milk.

The dairy farms shipped their milk to a Little Rock, Arkansas plant, which distributes throughout the mid-West.

It will take six months for the dairies to milk out the chemical, Adams said. NMPF is attempting to obtain imdemnification monies for the farmers.

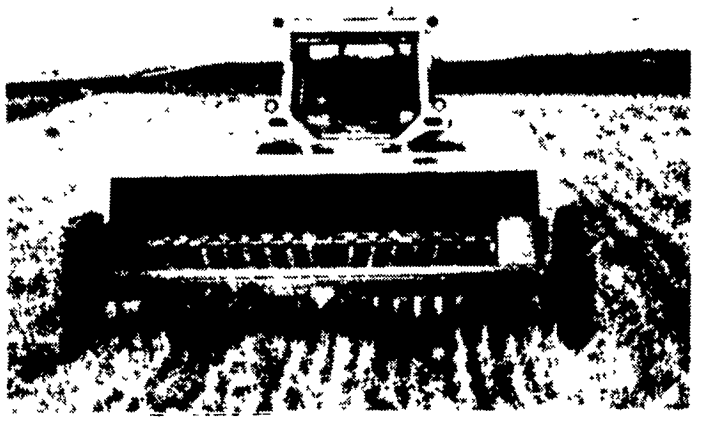
NO-TILL GRAIN DRILL



For Heavy Stubble and Hard Soils

The new Lilliston 9680 No-Till Grain Drill will operate in maximum severe conditions, where uniform penetration of heavy stubble and hard soils is required. Unlike some of the so-called "no-till" drills available today, which are actually conventional drills with front coulters added, the Lilliston is designed, from the ground up, for one purpose: No-till seeding.

Some Special Features

- Maximum empty weight of 7,160 lbs transfers 390 lbs. of down pressure to each of the 18 openers on 7 inch spacings.
- Heavy duty 14 inch cutting coulters and double disc openers, spring-loaded scrapers and center rib gauge wheels.
- Three hydraulic cylinders regulate pressure on openers for precision depth control
- Patented double-chambered feed cups which maintain even seed flow to the feed wheels
- Cluster gear boxes for easy selection of 27 application speeds of seed and fertilizer

Beatty family raises Guernseys for five decades

BY BETH NESBIT
Staff Correspondent

INDIANA — Situated two miles outside a university town is the Beatty family's Al-Mon Farm. A farm that has been raising quality registered Guernsey cattle for over five decades.

In 1930, Charles Beatty bought one registered cow and one grade Guernsey cow. It was with these two cows that Charles and his three sons Paul, Alvin and Clair based one of Indiana county's top Guernsey herds.

Charles's middle son, Alvin, took an active interest in the farm and formed a partnership with his father. Today Alvin Beatty credits the herd to the one registered cow his father purchased in 1930.

This cow, Itchen Nancy Ann, averaged 931 pounds of milk, and 372 pounds of fat for 339 days, which was good for that time. Itchen Nancy Ann stood in the Beatty barn for a total of sixteen years before she was sold to a neighboring dairy farmer for dairy purposes.

Alvin took as his first 4-H project one of Ann's many offspring in 1937.

As the years passed, Charles and Alvin continued to build their Guernsey herd until they were hit with a catastrophe. In 1945 the Beattys were fighting a losing battle with brucellosis. The disease almost destroyed the herd that they had worked so hard to build in the past fifteen years.

Alvin remembers those few years well, the brucellosis struck approximately forty of their animals, forcing the Beattys to struggle to reestablish themselves. It took nearly three years to rebuild the herd and gain a certified and accredited standing once again.

As the 1950's approached the Beattys were beginning to modernize their dairy operation. In 1949, the family bought their first mechanized milkers. This was followed eight years later with the addition of a new twenty eight tie stall milking facility.

It is in this facility that Alvin and his family have built their strong Guernsey herd. It is interesting to state that not an animal has been brought into this milking herd since 1957.

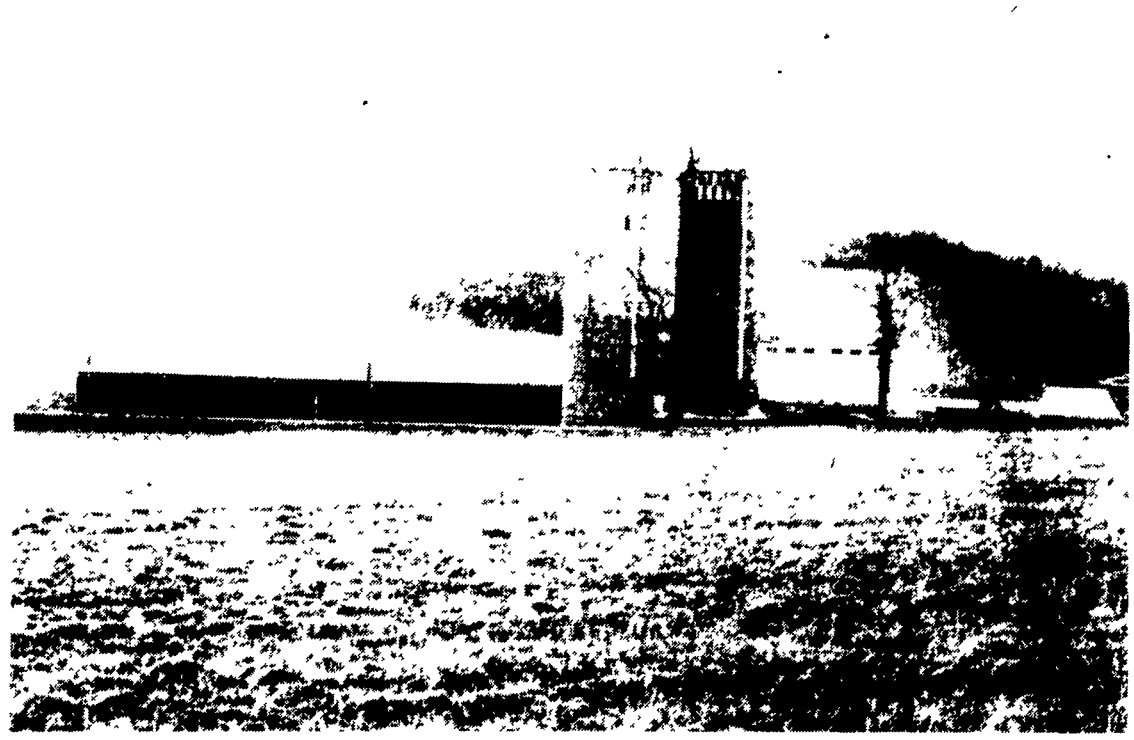
Alvin took the farm over for his ailing father in the mid sixties. With his wife Mona, and their four children, Alvin once again made the Beatty dairy operation a family affair.

Just as their father Alvin, Roger, Cheryl, June, and Robert, became active members in various dairy organizations. Roger and Robert, the oldest and youngest sons respectively, took their 4-H projects to the state level of competition where they stood at the top of their classes.

In 1980, the Beattys made the "biggest improvement so far." This improvement was a heifer and dry cow addition to their milking barn. With this addition, the Beattys are able to monitor the feeds their young heifers and dry cows are receiving.

When Alvin and Mona's children were growing up they were active in 4-H, FFA, and other agriculture related activities. Both Roger and Robert were active in their high school's Future Farmers of America chapters, and received their keystone farmer degrees.

Their daughter Cheryl was a 4-H dairy club member and daughter June, along with her brothers, has received many outstanding dairy club awards. Along with being an outstanding 4-H dairy club member she has been named outstanding Guernsey Girl, held the dairy princess title, and is currently chairman of the county's dairy princess promotion committee.



The Al-Mon Farm, located in Indiana County houses a herd of quality Guernseys.

Last year Alvin underwent a period of hospitalization and is now unable to do much strenuous work. This required Robert to take charge of running the farm under his father's guidance.

Today Al-Mon Farm manages a total of 240 acres of crops. Approximately 80 acres are corn, 35 acres barley, and the rest is in alfalfa and other hay mixtures.

The majority of the farm crops are put out under the strip plan. This system attracts many tour groups to the Beatty farm operation. These groups include biology and geography classes from the neighboring Indiana University of Pennsylvania. In 1979, Alvin received the county's conservation award for his soil conservation farming program.

Besides helping manage this dairy operation, Robert is increasingly involved with the advertising and distribution of his product. Along with being an active member of Pennsylvania Farmers Association, he is the vice president of the district board of Allied Milk Producers.

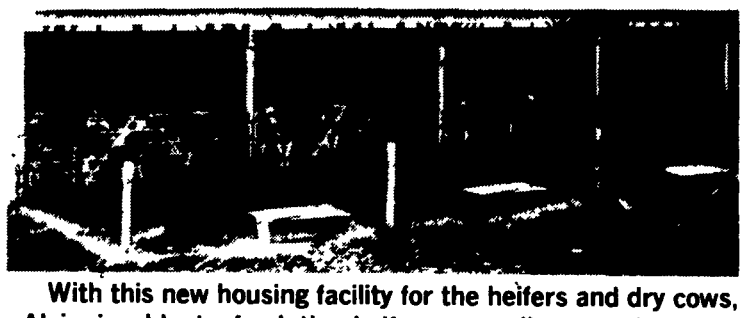
This board studies ways of lowering milk advertising costs and explores ways to increase advertising in the immediate area. It is gratifying for Robert to be active in this type of milk advertising organization as it gives him hands on experience with the public.

Al-Mon Farm's current rolling herd average stands at 37.3 cows with 11,864 pounds of milk, and 561 pounds of fat. Corn Silage and haylage is fed to the herd year round with each cow receiving approximately fifteen pounds of hay daily. Their grain feeding program is then balanced by Agway Inc., with the highest producers receiving soybean as a topdress.

Many of today's farmers see expansion as the key to remaining competitive in the marketplace. The Beattys, however, have taken a different strategy. Maintaining a quality herd of cattle has brought them where they are today. Robert and Alvin believe that by keeping the operation in the family, it will take them where they plan to go in the future.

Roger's oldest son, Timothy, is starting his first 4-H project this year. He is the fourth generation of Beattys to be interested in the dairy industry.

The persistence and dedication of the entire Beatty family, have been the two key characteristics to maintaining their quality Guernsey herd.



With this new housing facility for the heifers and dry cows, Alvin is able to feed the heifers according to what they require.

prices for all dairy products, whether sold in surplus or not.

The 12-cent assessment approved by Congress last week would raise the same amount of money as the 4.3-percent cut in CCC spending required by Gramm-Rudman.

USDA officials did not indicate when the President would sign the legislation into law.

According to Kika de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, the bill would:

• Restore much of a potential reduction in farm-by-farm "program yields" used in calculating income support payments for grain, cotton and rice farms;

• Provide that Gramm-Rudman budget cuts in the dairy price support program during fiscal 1986 will be made by increasing a previously-scheduled assessment on the price received by dairy farmers for all milk sold in the 48 continental states;

• Prevent the use of land taken out of grains, cotton and rice (under a special provision allowing producers to collect target price income payments on land idled beyond normal surplus-reduction requirements) to produce price-depressing surpluses of other commodities;

• Revise previously-authorized export assistance programs and make other changes in several farm programs; and

• Express the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Agriculture should make advance commodity support loans available to eligible farmers who cannot otherwise borrow money for spring planting.

"This bill makes some needed corrections and changes in farm programs that Congress adopted in 1985. Some of the specific provisions are complicated, but the bottom line of what we have done is clear and simple — it is to help protect the income of farmers during this critical period for American agriculture," de la Garza said.

The bill passed by the House, H.R. 1614, was identical to a measure approved by the Senate on Wednesday and was similar to bills adopted earlier by the House Agriculture Committee. The final version did not include a House Agriculture Committee provision extending the deadline for farmer bids in a dairy surplus reduction program, but de la Garza said he and other Congressional leaders will make a bipartisan appeal to the administration to delay the program enrollment deadline until April 1 by administrative action.

Major provisions of the bill include:

— The FARM PROGRAM YIELD section: This will revise a part of the 1985 farm bill which could confront some farmers with cuts in the "farm program yields" used in calculating income support payments for individual grain, cotton and rice producers. Under H.R. 1614, any cuts produced by a new yield formula included in the 1985 farm bill would be limited, in effect, to no more than 3 percent for 1986 crops and no more than 5 percent for 1987. This would be done by giving producers in-kind commodity payments to offset the impact of any yield reductions imposed by the 1985 formula which go beyond the new 3 percent and 5 percent limits. For the purpose of calculating program yield averages in 1988 and beyond, no farmer's 1986 yield could be set more than 10 percent below the 1985 level.

— The DAIRY COST-REDUCTION section: This section will provide full compliance with the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction requirements for the current fiscal year by increasing a scheduled all-milk price reduction — usually referred to as an assessment on dairy farmers — without requiring a steep, disruptive slash in the prices paid by the Agriculture Department for surplus dairy products purchased under its price support program. The assessment had previously been scheduled to take effect April 1 and to run at a rate of 40 cents per hundred pounds until Dec. 31 to offset costs of a new program under which farmers will reduce surpluses by taking whole herds out of production. Under H.R. 1614, the added assessment will be in effect from April 1 through Sept. 30 and cannot exceed 12 cents per hundred pounds. This will replace a reduction of 55 cents per hundred pounds which the Agriculture Department would otherwise make in support prices for milk used in making butter, cheese and nonfat milk solids.

The NONPROGRAM CROPS section revises a part of the 1985 farm law applying to grain, cotton and rice producers who cut acreage by more than the amount required under surplus control programs for those crops. The 1985 law would have allowed farmers who use the additional idled acres for conservation or other approved uses to collect income support payments on 92 percent of the total acreage eligible for planting to the basic crops (as long as 50 percent of the "permitted acreage" was actually used for the basic crop). That provision was interpreted by the Agriculture Department as allowing farmers to use the additional idled acreage for any nonprogram crops while still collecting income payments on 92 percent of permitted program acreage. H.R. 1614 would, in effect, ban eligibility for support payments on the additional idled acreage if a farmer uses it for crops which have not been specifically approved for this purpose by the Secretary of Agriculture — and that approval could be given only for commodities designated by the bill and only if planting a particular commodity on the additional idled acres would not drive down prices and incomes for existing producers of the commodity involved. (Note: The commodities which the Secretary could allow on additional idled acres, but only if this would not harm existing producers, include specifically designated relatively minor or experimental crops, such as sweet sorghum, guar and kenaf, and do NOT include commodities such as dry beans, peanuts, tobacco, and potatoes.) Haying and grazing on the additional idled acres will be allowed, at the option of state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committees, unless the Secretary of Agriculture rules this would have a serious adverse economic impact. The new rule on nonprogram crops would not apply to farmers who planted or contracted to plant such crops on additional idled land before Feb. 26, 1986. (Note: For producers who plant nonprogram crops on additional idled acreage without seeking income support payments on the acreage, the bill provides that planting history of the farmer's basic crop will be protected on up to half of his nonprogram crop acres in 1986 and 1987, up to 35 percent in 1988 and 20 percent in 1989, with no protection in 1990.)

Dairy assessment

The EXPORT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS section reduces mandatory funding levels for two export promotion programs. In the Targeted Export Assistance program, which initially required the Agriculture Department to use $325 million annually in cash or commodities for each of five fiscal years beginning with 1986 (to combat unfair trade practices of other exporters), the new bill reduces the mandatory floor to $110 million for the first three years and returns to $325 million for the 1989 and 1990 fiscal years. In an Export Enhancement Program which initially required use of not less than $2 billion in commodities as export "bonuses" during the period ending Sept. 30, 1988, the new law sets the minimum at $1 billion but gives the Secretary of Agriculture discretion to go up to a total of $1.5 billion.

The ADVANCE COMMODITY LOAN provision is a "sense of Congress" provision urging the Secretary of Agriculture to activate a section of the 1985 farm law which gives him discretionary authority to make advance commodity support loans to producers of any crop for which ordinary post-harvest support loans are available. The advance loans, if made, would be on a "recourse" basis, meaning that they must be repaid and cannot be satisfied by forfeiting the commodity collateral to the government. In addition, producers getting any such loans would have to protect their crops with crop insurance. Under H.R. 1614, the Secretary is urged to approve advance loans to producers who cannot otherwise get enough credit to finance planting of 1986 crops.

OTHER PROVISIONS of H.R. 1614 include:

— Authority for wheat and feed grain growers to graze or harvest hay during at least five principal growing-season months on acreage held out of 1986 grain production to satisfy acreage reduction program requirements.

— A section requiring the Secretary of Agriculture to hold public hearings on — and to implement — a marketwide service payment plan allowing dairy cooperatives to get compensation for processing non-member milk and providing other services such as transporting milk from other areas.

— A section reducing the salary level for the post of presidential Special Assistant for Agricultural Trade and Food Assistance which was created by the 1985 farm law. The level would be set at not less than the amount paid to Executive Level III officials (instead of the level I, cabinet Secretary level originally provided), and appointment of the new aide will be required by May 1, 1986.

— Discretionary authority for the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corporation to export up to $30 million worth of surplus commodities annually and to use the money to finance research and development on external combustion engines which use non-petroleum fuels.

— A directive to the Agency for International Development requiring submission by April 15 of a plan for using reserve funds for African famine relief.

— A directive requiring the administration to announce by March 31 the amount of surplus commodities owned by the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corporation which will be available during the current fiscal year for overseas donation under a program (Section 416) provided by existing law.

— An extension of time for completing studies of quality control systems used in the food stamp program.

— A provision allowing federally licensed operators of grain warehouses to transfer stored commodities to other licensed warehouses under terms to be specified in regulations by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Corn Conference speakers offer growers survival tips

BY SUZANNE KEENE

UNIVERSITY PARK — Like all farmers, Pennsylvania corn growers face an uncertain future clouded by Gramm-Rudman budget cuts. But some farmers will be survivors of these troubled economic times.

"There are men and women out there who are on a sound financial base, and they are going to survive," said Ken Rice, chairman of the first Pennsylvania Corn Conference held at Penn State University Tuesday.

To help Pennsylvania corn growers be among agriculture's survivors, the corn conference planners scheduled a day full of speakers who offered advice on topics ranging from improved production techniques to marketing alternatives.

Al Tank, assistant vice president of the National Corn Growers Association, provided an update on the Farm Bill for the 200 farmers attending the conference.

"I can't even tell you what the Farm Bill is going to be today," Tank said, but noted that grain farmers can expect further cuts in government programs.

Tank pointed out that 77 percent of all federal funding is exempt from the Gramm-Rudman cuts, while agriculture is 100 percent liable. Of the $65 billion Gramm-Rudman cuts designated for 1987, 18 percent will be from agriculture programs, he said.

"It doesn't bode very well for implementing programs," he continued.

"Agriculture is just a heartbeat away from mandatory controls," Tank warned. But if the Farm Bill can be implemented successfully, these supply controls can be avoided, he predicted. "There is no medium ground here."

Extension ag economist Lou Moore brought the corn growers up to date on the general economy, noting that agriculture has not shared in the prosperity enjoyed in most other areas of the economy.

Moore offered the farmers the following suggestions for planning for 1986 — recognize that the squeeze isn't over and dig in to be survivors; don't take on debt, and assume a role in developing farm programs. Survivors will also keep better records, improve efficiency and marketing knowledge, develop a business plan, and use government programs, he said.

William Waters, area farm management agent, urged growers to increase efficiency by using proper production techniques.

"We are approaching the point where those who don't use some of these production techniques will be left behind," he suggested.

A grower may survive for several years producing corn at a cost that exceeds the market price, but "in the long run, the producer must produce at or less than market price," Waters said.

For the most part, Waters continued, studies have shown that the more corn a farmer produces, the less his production cost per unit is. "We seem to be locked into a low market price," he said, noting that one way to survive is "to use the production techniques that allow us to get into those high yield rates."

In order to increase production, though, the grower must follow closely the recommendations of those who monitor the effects of different production variables. If even one variable — such as fertilizer or insect control — is off, production can be seriously reduced.

Among the efficiency techniques Waters suggested were: hybrid seed, plant establishment, weed and insect control, fertility, timeliness, and method.

A change to a reduced tillage system may also increase a farmer's efficiency by saving time and labor costs, Waters said. When selecting a tillage method, farmers should choose one that permits them to finish their work in the limited time allotted.

Studies have shown, Waters said, that a change from conventional to reduced tillage will decrease labor by one hour per acre, while a move to no-till cropping usually saves a farmer about an hour and a half per acre.

But, he cautioned, "Unless you pay strict attention, moving over to a minimum tillage program is no guarantee that you are going to reduce the cost of production." However, he added, a no-till program usually reduces production costs.

When setting a reasonable yield goal, farmers should plan to fertilize only up to the level where they set the goal. Any more fertilizer would be a waste of resources and increase production costs.

But producer is only one of the farmer's many roles; he must be an effective marketer as well. One marketing alternative for corn is to feed it to dairy beef cattle. "The time is at hand to do something different," noted Darwin Braund, director of dairy and livestock research for Agway, Inc. "Dairy cattle deserve a serious look as a viable alternative."

"Dairy beef, wrapped up in black and white hide, represents the answer to the consumer's desire for low-calorie beef," Braund noted.

Chain store tests have shown that consumers prefer the taste of dairy beef. But, he continued, chain stores refuse to handle two lines of beef. They look for consistent product quantity and quality. If a producer can offer these, he should be able to market his product, Braund said.

"Without some effort and success in marketing, the profit capability is small," he warned, but quickly added that given a market, "It's a very, very profitable enterprise."

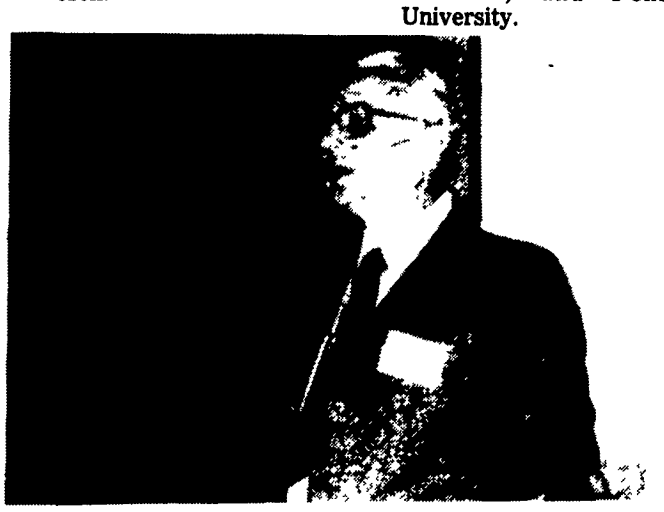
"Maybe it is time to set aside our conventional mentality and think about doing some things differently," he concluded.

In addition to the educational program the Conference offered the Pennsylvania Master Corn Grower's Association an opportunity to honor their charter 10-year members. Those honored were:

Joe Stump, Ben Wineka, Harold Bock, John McGill, Herman Espy, Marlin G. Hege, Harold Lockhoff, Joseph S. Beard, Galen Dreibelbis, Doeblers Hybrids, Clarence Godfrey, Charles M. Andlar, Lester A. Colhoun, Geroge Rumbaugh, Bob Nearhoff, Jr., Stanford Seed Co., Walter C. Johnson, John W. Schwartz, Joseph Hartle Jr., Ernest Hollenbaugh, and Thomas H. Mikesell.

Other 10 year members are: Mark Kieffer and Son, Harry H. Stambaugh, Dr. Joseph McGahen, Lester E. Luckenbaugh, John W. Greene and Son, Harold and Steven Gross, Richard E. Luckenbaugh, Chris and Willard Kimmel, Codorus Fertilizer Service, Richard Burd, Todd Hybrids, Pioneer Hybrids, Hoffman Seeds, William C. Gerhart, Frank White, Druck Farms, Kenneth Rice, Ray A. Layser, John T. Smith, William Hoover, Wayne Harpster, Charles A. Hess, Donald E. Crouse and George E. Steele.

Conference sponsors were The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers' Association, Allied Industries, and Penn State University.



Farm management agent William Waters was one of several speakers at the first Pennsylvania Corn Conference who offered corn growers ideas for surviving in tough economic times.

It keeps your feed costs on track.

Now all the advantages of computerized feeding are available to stanchion barn operators!

Individually programmed rations to meet each cow's feed requirements. Multiple feedings up to 10 times a day. Accurate, automatic dispensing of feed. That's how the Alfa Laval Feed Car brings major production gains to the stanchion barn operator. Large or small!

Up to 20% savings in feed costs

By giving less feed at one time but more feedings each day – the Alfa Laval Feed Car makes more efficient use of your feeds. Studies show more accurate distribution of feeds will lower your feed costs by as much as 20%!

Increased milk and butterfat production per cow

With the Alfa Laval Feed Car each cow gets an individually programmed ration based on milk production and lactation. By feeding "little and often" the rumen function is greatly improved allowing better feed conversion. The pay-off comes in higher milk and butterfat production plus lower veterinary costs due to improved herd health.

Saves you time and labour

While you're attending to other matters, your Alfa-Laval Feed Car is at work 24 hours a day. Fully automated and feeding 4 to 5 cows per minute this mobile feed car distributes one or two types of feed to the entire herd such as high moisture corn plus a protein supplement. You don't even have to pre-mix.

Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club plans meeting

MEADVILLE — Western Pennsylvania Jersey breeders are ready to host Jersey enthusiasts on April 11th and 12th for the 1986 Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club. Headquartered at the Quality Inn, Meadville, the annual meeting promises up to date information on breed genetics, farm tours, entertainment, fellowship, and a high caliber bred heifer and calf sale.

The featured speaker for the weekend of events will be Cari Weinberg Wolfe, American Jersey Cattle Club Area Representative for Southeast United States. She holds a B.S. degree from Virginia Tech, and an M.S. degree in Animal Science from North Carolina State.

At North Carolina State her research involved summarizing data from the AJCC type appraisal program. From this education, Wolfe was able to provide the leadership for the development of the Dixieland Jersey Sires proving group in 1985. The group involves Jersey breeders in her represented area.

Knowledgable in all facets of the AJCC programs, Wolfe is especially interested in the young sire proving and genetic advancement programs. Jersey breeders will appreciate her understanding and enthusiasm on this subject.

The PJCC festivities will begin on Friday, April 11th, at 12 noon at the Mercer County 4-H Park, north on Route 19, Mercer. High quality bred heifers from across the state will be paraded in front of buyers. Top sires and service sires are represented in this offering and most heifers will be springing or due within two months of the sale. Lunch will be available at the park. Sale Chairman, John McConnell, Volant, urges breeders who need spring and summer milk to look over this collection of heifers.

If younger stock is needed, there will be a select offering of ten calves after the bred heifer sale. Calves ranging in age from intermediate to yearlings will suit the production and show minded individual.

Jersey Queen contestants will undergo personal interviews early in the evening and then enjoy the buffet before the contest. Contestants seeking to represent the Jersey breed across the state in 1986 will vie for the title of Pennsylvania State Jersey Queen. State queens will also compete in the national contest in November in Louisville, Kentucky.

Entertainment for the evening will include a barbershop quartet and an open ice cream bar. There will also be sessions on young sire sampling for interested breeders after the contest.

Farm tours will begin the day on Saturday, April 12th, as Jersey people tour the farms of David and Donna Reusing, Meadville, Jeff Peters, Meadville, and Thomas and Carolyn Sanderson, Conneat Lake.

The Reusing family of four milk three times a day in an immaculate stanchion barn. Their 20 plus cows boast the highest herd average of the Jersey breed in the state, and one of the highest of all breeds in Mercer County.

Jeff Peters, in partnership with Charles Hotson for five years, milks 60 cows and farms over 200 acres. This Jersey farm has had Jerseys on it since the early 1900's. The Sanderson crop and dairy farm boasts over 100 registered Jerseys pumping out their protein and fat enriched product.

Annual awards will conclude the weekend after the banquet on Saturday and breeders can return home refreshed with fellowship and new ideas. All members and enthusiasts are encouraged to attend.

Reservations are needed by March 25th. Send motel reservations directly to the Quality Inn, 240 Conneaut Lake Road, Meadville, Pa. 16335. (One person - $40, 2 people - $42) Send remaining reservations to: Carolyn Sanderson, R2, Conneaut Lake, Pa. 16316 or call 814-382-6985.

The April 11th buffet is $10.85 per adult, $6.05 children under ten. April 12th bus tours are $1 per person or $5 per family. The annual meeting banquet is a choice of braised swiss steak at $9.10 or braised stuffed pork chops at $9.65. For more information call Carolyan Sanderson 814-382-6985.

Sale catalogs are available by request from John E. McConnell, R2, Box 219, Volant, Pa. 16156. For more information on the bred heifers call McConnell at 412-530-7345. For information on the calves and calf sale, call Jeff Peters at 814-724-6030.

House Ag leaders praise Reagan move on inspections

WASHINGTON – Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., of the House Agriculture Committee said that President Reagan's decision to comply with Congressional requests to avoid disruption of the federal meat and poultry inspection program was a "welcome move that will benefit farmers, the processing industries and consumers."

De la Garza's comment came after the President sent Congress a formal request for release of $5.7 million in previously appropriated funds for the inspection program. Since Congress had already appropriated the money for use in the current fiscal year, the President's action automatically made the funds available for inspections which assure the wholesomeness of meat and poultry sold to consumers.

"I want to emphasize that this is not new spending. What has happened simply is that funds which Congress appropriated last year for meat and poultry inspection in fiscal 1986, with a proviso that they would be released when formally requested and released," de la Garza explained. "This will be helpful for farmers, processing industries and consumers because it means that the Agriculture Department will now have to make sharp cuts in its meat and poultry inspection schedules in order to reach its Gramm-Rudman budget reduction totals for the remaining months of fiscal 1986."

Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., Chairman of the Subcommittee on Livestock, Dairy, and Poultry, noted that furloughing inspectors to the extent threatened earlier would have had a sharp impact on the livestock and poultry economy because meat and poultry plants cannot operate without federal inspectors. With the decision to use the previously appropriated funds, officials have indicated that furloughs can be limited to three holidays when meat and poultry plants would normally be closed, Coelho said.

Administration action to release the $5.7 million in previously appropriated funds was requested Feb. 20 in a letter signed by all Members of the subcommittee including Coelho and the Ranking Minority Member, Rep. Jim Jeffords, R-Vt. The request was also signed by de la Garza and Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., Ranking Minority Member of the full Agriculture Committee. The letter pointed out that the Food Safety and Inspection Service had been required under the fiscal 1986 Gramm-Rudman order to cut outlays by more than $15 million and the agency had indicated that about $9 million of the cuts would be found by furloughing agency personnel including inspectors.

Coelho said that on the basis of the department's earlier indications of furloughs which might be necessary during fiscal 1986, it had been calculated that the action might have cost processing workers $100 million in lost wages and benefits through September because of reduced operations.

"Such action would not only harm industry workers, farmers and consumers, but it would fail to address the real issue of how best to get budget savings by modernizing the meat and poultry inspection system, and it could damage public confidence in this essential consumer protection program. We are glad the administration has agreed to take the far more practical course of using its already-available funds while it continues to search for effective ways to economize," de la Garza and Coelho said.

PFA criticizes choice of new PDA deputy

CAMP HILL – Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association today expressed disappointment in the appointment of Kirk Wilson, mayor of Carlisle, as the new deputy secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, according to an announcement by the farm group's state president, Keith W. Eckel.

Wilson, recently elected Carlisle mayor, is a former radio and television reporter in Harrisburg. He spent three years on the Pennsylvania House of Representatives staff; worked for the Governor's Energy Council and the Governor's Press Office.

"It's a disappointment to me and members of the PFA Board that Governor Dick Thornburgh has seen fit to turn his back on agriculture again," said PFA President Keith W. Eckel. "It seems as though the administration is going out of its way to disassociate itself from agriculture. That's disappointing, because there were many strong backers of the Governor in rural Pennsylvania."

The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association had unsuccessfully opposed the nomination of Agriculture Secretary Richard Grubb, because the farm organization did not believe he had the necessary agricultural experience to head the department.

"Our farmer members have adopted strong policy stating that the agriculture secretary and deputy secretary should have agricultural experience," Eckel said, "because the administration looks to those persons for developing policies affecting the number one business (agriculture) in Pennsylvania."

PFA has received, reports Eckel, a public commitment from the Lt. Governor William Scranton and Robert Casey, the two major party endorsed candidates, to place persons with agricultural experience in positions of leadership in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

PFA is a general farm organization with more than 23,000 farm family members in Pennsylvania. It is also affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest general farm organization in the country.

'Future' conference opens Wednesday in Harrisburg

UNIVERSITY PARK — As the farm goes, so goes the state, says Arthur Davis, Maurice K. Goddard professor of forestry and environmental resources at Penn State.

"The decisions we make today will affect the future of the entire Commonwealth into the next century."

Davis will chair the first Future of Pennsylvania Agriculture Conference Wednesday and Thursday in Harrisburg. "It is the beginning of a process which will determine the future shape of all of the state's agricultural components," says Davis.

Over 300 government, agriculture, industry and academic leaders will attend the conference. They will discuss topics ranging from emerging technologies in agriculture to the effect of Pennsylvania's large non-farm population on agricultural production.

"Non-farmers need to know and care about what happens to farming," Davis says. "With Pennsylvania home to more rural residents than any other state, farmers must have the support of all people to continue their operations."

Davis says that many non-farmers are generally aware of the plight of the modern farmer, but few Pennsylvanians realize that their farming neighbors are somewhat less burdened than farmers in the Midwest.

"Our agriculture is more diversified, and less dependent on the vagaries of one or two markets, or national agricultural programs. We have greater opportunities for earning off-farm income. Our land values have not been as unstable as those in the Midwest," Davis says.

That, in addition to Pennsylvania farmers' conservative borrowing and the advantage of proximity to major markets, has increased our status as a farming state, Davis adds.

However, "we're not immune to the ills that plague farmers elsewhere," Davis says. "A game plan is necessary. We are not talking about fuzzy goals and high hopes, but the particular actions that must be taken to adapt the state's agricultural industry to the nation and the world.

"We will be setting a general direction, identifying the questions and examining their status. This will be the basis for detailed plans and definitive actions."

According to Davis, the conference is the first of a three-part series of meetings through 1987 which will address farming issues, such as marketing strategies, safeguarding water and farmland, rural life, and using emerging technology to maintain a competitive edge with other agricultural regions.

For more information on the conference, including information on late registration, contact Dr. Lamartine F. Hood, Dean, College of Agriculture, 201 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, Pa., 16802 or call (814) 865-8301.

Extension group lobbies legislators

HARRISBURG, PA — The Pennsylvania Council of Cooperative Extension Associations (PCCEA) held its ninth annual Capitol Day and Legislative Banquet in Harrisburg recently. The Council sponsors the banquet to express appreciation to state legislators for their support of Pennsylvania's Cooperative Extension programs.

The day-long program included visits to legislators' offices in the afternoon as well as the evening banquet. The volunteers were asking the legislators to fund a special package of agriculture, technology and extension programs.

The funding package is needed to continue Extension staffing levels and programs, to support biotechnological research, and to replace obsolete, worn-out equipment. The request is for $2.9 million.

Speakers at the banquet included: Richard Grubb, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture; Samuel Hayes, state representative (81st District); Dr. W. Wayne Hinish, dean of the College of Agriculture; and Mary Grim, PCCEA president.

"Pennsylvania's No. 1 industry — agriculture, is important to all Pennsylvanians," said Secretary Grubb. "One in five Pennsylvanians is employed in an ag related business in Pennsylvania."

In his remarks Representative Hayes stressed the importance of continuing the partnerships that have served agriculture well. "Agriculture has grown and prospered because of the unique cooperative effort between local, state, and federal government and the people — called Cooperative Extension," Hayes said.

"We need to continue to provide the kinds of research and Extension programs that have helped the people of Pennsylvania," said Dr. Hinish.

"Pennsylvania agriculture is a world class industry," Hinish added. "Our ability to produce, process, and distribute food and fiber products is the envy of the world. How long Pennsylvania agriculture will remain a world class industry will depend on how willing we are to invest in our future.

"We cannot withstand the proposed federal cuts which chops at the very roots of our research and educational support base. This will be a major challenge to our program effectiveness next year.

"Our Extension Service makes direct contact with one of every 10 Pennsylvanians each year and takes our research-based information to the people. Our programs are for urban and rural families alike, young and old, and are supported at the county and community level by thousands of volunteers."

The Pennsylvania Council of Cooperative Extension Associations represents those volunteers. The Council advises Extension on programs and priorities at the county and state level.

Schuylkill County DHIA

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

PITMAN — The Schuylkill County DHIA association held their annual awards meeting recently, at the Mahantonga Fire Company, Pitman, Pa. The 59th year of the association was celebrated with 39 herds on test for the year, 1985.

The high herd for the year went to the 30 cow herd of Brian Ruch, Andreas. This is the first year at the top of the county list for the 25 year old dairyman who managed his cows to the top production of 21,843 pounds of milk, and 838 pounds of fat. Ruch was also recognized as the most improved herd in milk production, fat production, and protein production for the year. His production rose from the 1984 average of 19,280 M, 755 F, and 627 P.

Carl A. Farms, Pitman, took second place honors in yearly production averages with their 58 registered Holsteins producing 20,805 M and 821 F. The well-known India cow in the Carl A. Farms herd took the top honors in individual production records for milk and fat with her records of 29,280 M and 1,197 F. "Patula", another cow from the Carl A. Farms herd received first place in the individual awards for protein production with 895 P on 27,967 pounds milk.

Recognition was also given to Jere Gearhart, Ringtown, for the lowest somatic cell count in the county. Gearhart maintained an average count of 136,000 with his 57 Holsteins pumping out an average of 16,091 M and 575 F for 1985.

The average production for all the herds in Schuylkill County was 16,312 M and 613 F, almost 1000 pounds above the state average of 15,771 M and 580 F.

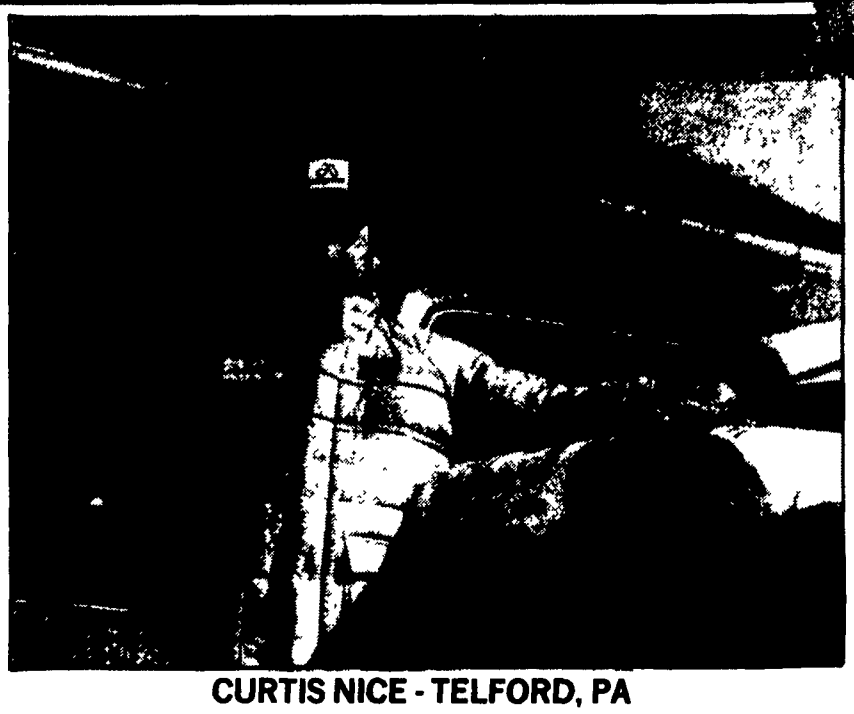
ASGROW



Soybean grower Curtis Nice grows Asgrow brand soybean seed.

He States, "I averaged between 51 and 52 bushels of Asgrow soybeans to the acre on 70 acres last year."

CURTIS NICE - TELFORD, PA

"One field behind the house yielded 65 bushels to the acre in a 22 acre field. They were A-3127's. Those 3127's didn't look like they would yield 65 bushels, but the beans were there. Hurricane Gloria went through them and they stood well, even though they tipped in a few places. They still harvested OK."

"Besides the 3127's, I use the Asgrow 3860 and 2943. Those three varieties work for me."

'Ag enterprise' seminar slated

UNIVERSITY PARK — Entrepreneurs interested in creating their own farm business can start their venture on the right track by attending the day-long "Small Scale Ag Enterprise Seminar," scheduled for Saturday, March 22.

The seminar will be held at the Sewickley Country Inn, located on Route 65 two miles north of Interstate 95's Exit 19. The event, sponsored by Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service, will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Westmoreland County Agent and seminar organizer Eric Oesterling says his office gets many requests from people who think they want to get into agriculture.

"They have some land which they think should be paying for itself, or they always wanted to be a farmer. In any case, they often have little background in agriculture or the particular enterprise they are considering," he explains. "This seminar will introduce the audience to the basics and to the sources to which they can turn for more reliable information."

Oesterling says the seminar will concentrate on enterprise possibilities for small acreages. Penn State specialists, county agricultural agents and successful state farmers will address each session.

The morning session will cover topics like soil and fertilizer care, machinery management, and small farm buildings and facilities. Participants can choose two of the following afternoon sessions: nursery and greenhouse crops, Christmas trees, livestock enterprises, horse enterprises, small animal production, vegetables, field crops and beekeeping.

"People who want to start a profitable agricultural venture today can't afford many mistakes," Oesterling says. "The Small Scale Ag Enterprises seminar will give people good, objective advice on the possibilities."

The seminar's $12 registration fee, which includes the cost of lunch and educational materials, must be mailed by Friday, March 14. Make checks payable to the Westmoreland County Extension Fund, and send to the Westmoreland County Extension Service, Small Scale Ag Enterprises Seminar, P.O. Box 250, Greensburg, PA 15601. For more information, call your county office of the Cooperative Extension Service.

It is designed for those who seek management and other professional positions in landscape nurseries, production nurseries or garden center operations.

Students take technical and scientific classes in agronomy, botany, horticulture, landscape architecture and plant pathology. To improve their communications skills students also take classes in speech, English, and in individual and family studies.

Dr. David J. Beattie, assistant professor of ornamental horticulture at Penn State, coordinates the program.

Alfred State plans Ag Day events

ALFRED, NY — Farm tours, special displays, horse-drawn wagon rides, and a traditional "down on the farm" dinner are among events planned at Alfred State College as part of the Wednesday, March 19 observance of National Agriculture Day.

Events are being organized by members of the Collegiate Agricultural Leaders (CAL) Club who extend an invitation to the public to visit the campus, the college farm, and other college agricultural facilities on local "Ag Day." Most activities are planned between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Attractions will include: live animal exhibits such as cattle, sheep, and swine; milking, and sheep-shearing and blocking demonstrations; horticulture displays; maple syrup boiling demonstrations; machinery and agricultural engineering exhibits; campus and farm tours; demonstrations of draft horse harnessing and hitching.

Visitors also will be able to watch baby chicks hatch from eggs, according to student co-chairmen Colleen Spahr of Lancaster, PA, and Thomas Sampson of Rushford, seniors in the animal husbandry curriculum.

Microscopes will be available for viewing samples containing protozoa and bacteria, they said.

Samples of dairy products to be offered visitors will include ice cream "made while you watch" by students in the agricultural science curriculum.

More than 100 students enrolled in the college's agricultural curriculums are involved in plans for the 1986 observance, according to Professor Terry Tucker, CAL Club adviser.

Many of the exhibits will be in the lounge area of central dining hall, with other exhibits and demonstrations scheduled outdoors throughout the day in the vicinity of the dining hall and the agricultural science building.

As in past years, students and faculty have invited youngsters from area schools to take part in "Ag Day" events, including visits to the nearby college farm. Several schools are expected to accept the invitation.

Featured as the evening meal for the entire student body on "Ag Day" will be a farm-style dinner with a menu which promotes agriculture's role in good nutrition. Serving the students will be members of the faculty and staff in agricultural technologies.

One of the oldest schools in the nation offering agriculture, Alfred (founded in 1908) traditionally uses "Ag Day" to focus attention on programs, facilities and the people who make the college a leader in agriculture education.

Purpose of National Agriculture Day, which was first observed in 1973, is to recognize the farmers, ranchers, horticulturists, and aquaculturists who produce hundreds of agricultural commodities and who also provide a forum for the education of others concerning the value of various agricultural industries.

Meeting set on trickle irrigation

NEW HOLLAND — The Eastern Lancaster County Adult Farmer Program will sponsor a Trickle Irrigation Meeting on Thursday evening, March 20th, at 7:30 p.m. at the Blue Ball Elementary School.

The main emphasis of the meeting will be to discuss managing a trickle irrigation system for vegetable and fruit production.

Topics that will be studied will include fertilizer injection, filters for different situations, selecting adequate equipment, water and fertilizer requirements for different crops, and other management tips for vegetable and fruit growers.

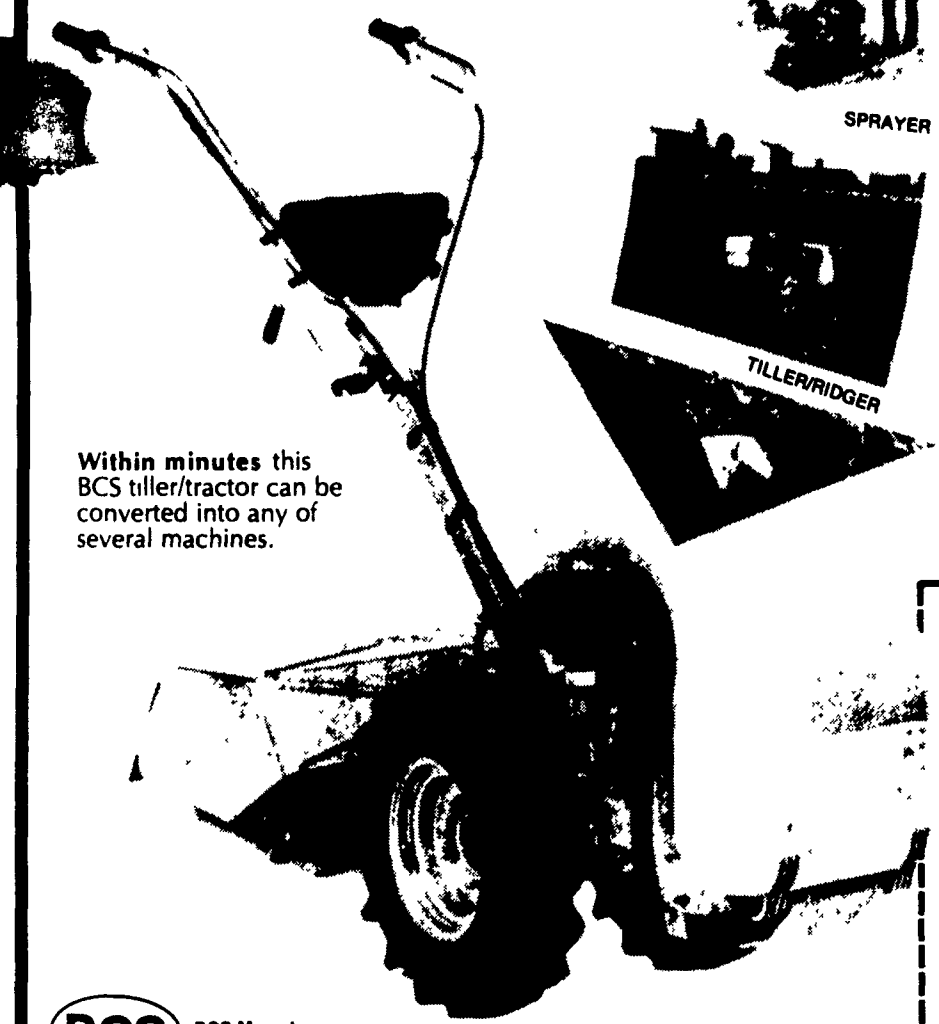
A representative from Trickl-eez Co., drip irrigation specialists from Michigan, will be the speaker. Local trickle equipment distributors will be on hand to share some experiences as well.

As Lancaster County vegetable and fruit production increases dramatically, the need for irrigation to help produce a uniform, quality product becomes more and more important. Many do-it-yourself irrigation setups are not properly designed or managed for maximum profit.

A properly managed system should more than pay for itself in a few years and improve protection during dry periods as well as increase production, quality and improve the producers ability to manage his crops for maximum profit.

The Blue Ball School is located one mile east of Blue Ball on Ewell Road, between routes 23 and 322. All interested persons are invited. For additional information contact the Adult Farmer office at 354-4525.

Introducing a masterpiece of engineering that's a tiller... and so much more



Within minutes this BCS tiller/tractor can be converted into any of several machines.

Introducing the world's most versatile rear-tine tiller: the BCS 715. Within minutes it can become a rotary mower, snow-blower, sprayer or any of several other handy machines.

Of course, you may not want it to do anything but till. In that case, you'll find the 715 is a powerful, but lightweight tiller that handles beautifully. Partly because it's so compact; and partly because its center of gravity is unusually low.

Mechanically, there's nothing like the BCS 715 because it works by direct drive. That means it has no chains or belts The engine crankshaft operates the power take-off in a direct line through an automotive-type clutch.

The 715 tills the soil into very fine particles, without leaving an untilled strip in the middle.

Like some other tillers, the 715's tines are in the back. But unlike most other machines, the BCS cannot till in reverse. This helps make it the world's safest.

The 715 is just one model in a complete line of BCS rear-tine tillers. Available in various sizes for different-sized jobs, they've just been introduced from Europe where the BCS is the largest selling small tiller.

Of course, the BCS line is serviced here by U.S. dealers who've been fully trained. And all parts are available in this country.

Check into the BCS . . . the most versatile, compact, and safest tiller in the world.

PFA applauds revisions to 1985 Farm Bill

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) has praised passage of legislation in the U.S. Congress that clarifies and improves the 1985 farm program, approved by Congress in late December.

The legislation (The 1986 Food Security Improvements Act) was approved late last week by Congress following an extensive lobbying effort by more than 200 Pennsylvania farmers in the nation's capital this week.

"We have been seeking positive changes in the 1985 farm program for several months, and this legislation carries out the directives of our policy goals," Keith W. Eckel, PFA president, said today. "We believe this legislation will make a big, overall improvement both in the administering of the program and applying the farm program provisions at the farmer level."

Eckel said that the farm group did oppose further assessments on dairy farmers, but the bill gave the U.S. agriculture secretary power to increase the dairy assessment to farmers another 12 cents per hundredweight.

The bill did not change the manner in which producers calculate milk marketing history for the whole herd buyout provided by the 1985 farm program, sought by some dairy interests, according to the farm leader.

Participants could plant as much as half of their permitted acreage in non-program commodities and receive program benefits under the set aside provision in the 1985 farm program. These crops could actually compete with other farmers, lowering market prices for non-participating crops.

The action by Congress will permit only haying and grazing, unless the agriculture secretary sees a serious adverse economic impact, according to Eckel.

Under the 1985 farm bill, the base acreage formula for determining price supports was based on a five-year history average. This five-year average could have reduced crop bases, forcing some producers to plow under some of the crop in order to comply with program guidelines.

"Action by the Congress made a major change in determining price supports," the farm leader said. "If the farmer's actual compensation under current farm programs is reduced by more than three percent this year, he will be compensated for the reduction with Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) stocks. That's a major improvement for farmers."

Eckel explained that if the farmer's compensation is reduced by five percent in 1987 or 10 percent in 1988, he would again be compensated with CCC stocks.

Other provisions of the Food Security Improvements Act set the salary for the special assistant for the agricultural trade and food assistance program; and reduce the amount of CCC commodities required to be used in the export enhancement program from $2 billion to $1 billion.

Dietrich's Milk Products reaches agreement for milk plant

SYRACUSE, NY – United Dairy Cooperative Services, a Division of Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation Inc., announced today that on February 21, 1986, it reached an agreement in principle with Dietrich's Milk Products, Inc., of Reading, Pa., for Dietrich to acquire the Middlebury Center, Pa., milk manufacturing plant. In making the announcement, Cooperative President James Patsos said that, "Subsequent negotiations resulting in both a short-term lease and a purchase by Dietrich will serve as major positive steps in NEDCO's reorganization plan."

Dietrich's, a large specialty milk powder and butter manufacturer located in the Southeast Pennsylvania region, plans to have the Middlebury plant operational by March 31, thus helping to facilitate milk handling during the spring flush period. "This is a great plus for the market," Patsos stated, "particularly for the area dairy farmers and the former employees of the plant." United Dairy Cooperative Services will assist in arranging a milk supply for the plant and perform necessary cooperative bargaining services for the producers.

Dietrich's Milk Products, a family-owned corporation in business since 1926, has been searching for an opportunity like the Middlebury operation to expand its capacity to meet the anticipated growth in the market it serves. The existing facility, however, will have to be rebuilt and modernized to meet Dietrich's high standards. To accomplish this, the company will need substantial financing.

According to Thomas Dietrich, Vice-President of Dietrich's, the company has begun to pursue both tax-free and Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority (PIDA) funding. Growth Resources of Wellsboro (GROW) has approved the project and has agreed to sponsor Dietrich's application for PIDA financing. Upon receipt of PIDA, court, and other approvals, Dietrich's is prepared to complete the acquisition and begin making the improvements needed to assure a long-term future for the Middlebury Center operation. "We're excited about the potential of this project," Dietrich indicated, "and look forward to the development of a long-term relationship with the farmers and the communities of the region."

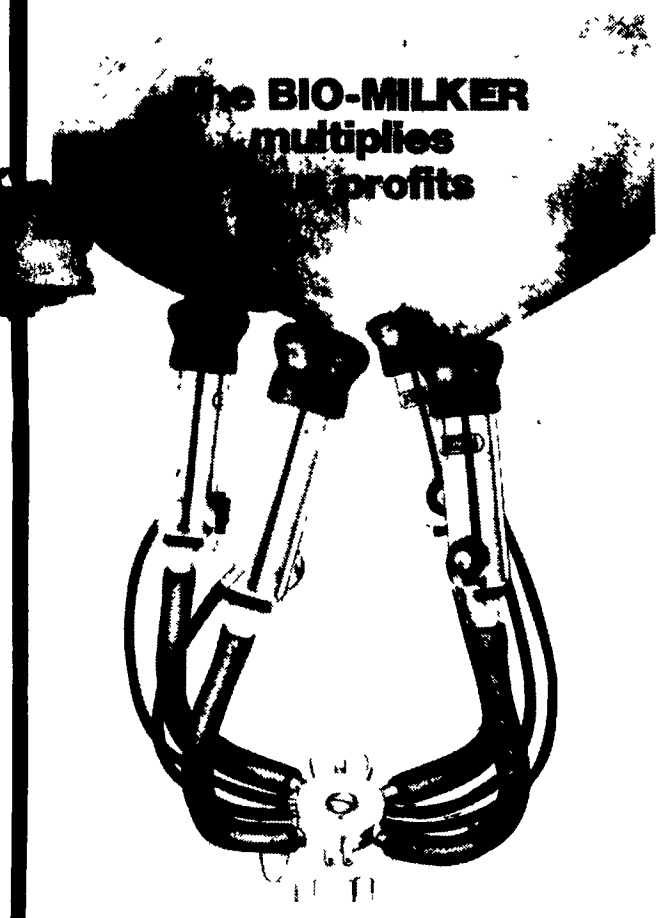
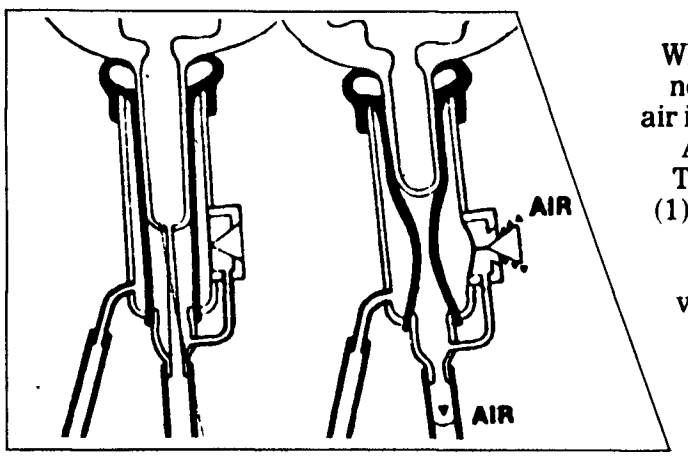
WESTFALIA HIGH TECH DAIRYING®

BIO-MILKER

A New Way to Better Milking





The High Tech people have done it again. We won't flatly declare that the new Westfalia Bio-Milker Cluster will revolutionize dairying, but it could come close.

What is the new Bio-Milker about? Well, the new patented design features an automatic air inlet valve located just under the teat end. Air enters only during the massage phase. This controlled air burst has two functions. (1) It reduces the risk of infection by moving the milk away from the teat end, eliminating return flow. (2) It releases the vacuum under the teat end, ensuring a biologically desired pressure release of teat tissue.

The Bio-Milker makes it possible for the first time to harmonize milking technique with a natural, gentle, protective biological milking rythm.

It's the new Westfalia Bio-Milker for Healthier Udders, Faster Milking, Reduced Cell Count, Longer Productive Cow Life. Contact your Westfalia Sales Center today, or call or write for more information.

Pennsylvania 4-H Week — March 16 to 23

Former 4-H'er Evelyn Hess is Farm and Home Foundation leader

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Editor's Note: Leadership is one of the most highly visible skills 4-H'ers learn. While most 4-H'ers do not become president, governor or senator, many of them do become effective leaders within their communities. In observance of Pennsylvania 4-H Week, March 16 to 23, Lancaster Farming highlights two former Lancaster County 4-H'ers who serve in a leadership capacity with Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation as well as other community organizations. Look for other 4-H features throughout B section.

Lancaster — Evelyn Hess, 817 Waterfront Drive, became the first women president of the Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation two years ago. She had previously served as secretary for 12 years, so is thoroughly involved in the Foundation's leadership. She is also a former 4-H'er, well informed in the leadership skills necessary to run a board of directors.

As she turns over the reins to her successor, she says she is glad to participate simply as a committee person once again. But she is firm in her support of the Foundation and the important role the Farm and Home Center plays in the Lancaster community.

Evelyn says, "I see how much the building is used, and how it benefits so many people. I think it is used more and more all the time." She is especially happy about some of the improvements which have taken place in the building, the most notable of which is the painting of the walls in the auditorium to give it a warmer atmosphere. "The improvements have added to the overall usability," she notes.

About her term as president, Evelyn says, "It was an interesting experience." It kept her in close contact with the building manager Chet Neuin, as well as the board. Additionally, she adds, "I never minded being secretary, but is it work. You have to keep track of the meetings and what goes on."

Having served as a member of the scholarship committee for many years, Evelyn calls that her most rewarding service. "There are a lot of children I knew vaguely and we could watch their progression." With the cost of college climbing ever higher, she also believes the Foundation is providing valuable assistance with their $1,000 scholarships.

This year a total of 15 scholarships will be offered, with up to ten to be given to students studying home economics and agriculture and the remainder to those studying nursing. Selecting the final recipients is not easy, but Evelyn believes the hard work of the committee pays off in seeing students get a good start in their freshman year.

Evelyn became a 4-H member when she was ten years old, and continued through her 18th year, enjoying both beef projects and sewing projects. The oldest of a family of three sisters, Evelyn recalls that she was encouraged to join by a neighbor, Milton Jurell, who was a leader with the Red Rose Baby Beef and Lamb Club.

Evelyn was born in Manheim Township, and it was not until she was nine that her family moved to the Lititz area to farm. Her father did general farming, including raising tobacco, chickens, pigs and dairy animals. Steers were their chosen 4-H projects, she says, because her father was interested in feeding steers and didn't own registered dairy cows.

She remembers that County Agent Max Smith came to all the

With new project books focusing on nutrition education, Evelyn finds she must do her homework prior to 4-H meetings. Here she prepares a project lesson for her cooking club.

Evelyn Hess credits 4-H with teaching her many of the home skills she uses every day. Here, she waters one of the many plants that decorate her home.

4-H alumnus Darvin Boyd continues to be active in ag community

BY SALLY BAIR

LANCASTER — "I have never been shy in talking about how much my 4-H experiences meant to me." These are Darvin Boyd's words as he reflects on the 11 years he spent as a member of the Lancaster County Red Rose Baby Beef and Lamb Club, and the Lincoln Community Club.

Newly elected as president of the Farm and Home Foundation, Boyd recalls helping to solicit donations for the construction of the Farm and Home Center in those difficult early years, and says, "As a college student I was glad to get some contributions for the Center. As I look back when it was constructed, the people who made it possible gave a yeoman's effort."

Now that he is taking the reins as president, Boyd says, "The Center serves an important role for meetings in the agricultural community, but it goes way beyond that. The time is ripe for us to take a look at programs and evaluate our position over the next three to five years. We want to be able to keep the Farm and Home Center as the hub of meeting places in Lancaster County and give it the proper attention to keep it that."

An outstanding 4-H'er while in Lancaster County, Boyd now is in a position to support 4-H as vice president and director of the Agri-Finance Department for Hamilton Bank. He says, "Because of my experience I can encourage the bank to support many of these programs. We have a commitment to rural youth and to the rural community. Hamilton Bank supports over 50 programs in the seven counties of our marketing area."

Boyd says he remembers joining 4-H, following in the footsteps of his brother who was three years older, saying, "We as a family were interested in projects which would give us responsibility and learn to know other people, and 4-H was a natural organization for us to get involved in."

Boyd became really involved, with the support of his late parents, Elmer and Pauline, eventually taking over 14 different projects, and traveling to Penn State a total of five or six times on judging teams, to Leadership School and other activities.

Because of his total involvement, he was named the Pennsylvania winner in Achievement and attended the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, the highest honor for a 4-H'er. He traveled to the event twice, the second time as Darvin Boyd stands by some of the advertising pages used by Hamilton Bank. He enjoys his work in the agri-finance department because of the chance to work closely with rural people in a seven-county area.

At his desk at Hamilton Bank, Darvin Boyd surrounds himself with some 4-H mementos. He feels strongly that much of his present success is due to the opportunities he had in 4-H.

meetings. "He was very much looked up to," she says, and now enjoys a continuing association with him as he serves the Foundation in an advisory capacity.

How was 4-H important to her? Evelyn says with a smile, "I was really, really bashful, and 4-H helped me get over it. I also made a lot of friends that I have to this day. We still keep in touch, and I would never have known them without 4-H.

There's every chance, of course, that her husband, J. Robert, might have remained unknown to her without 4-H. After all, he grew up on a dairy farm near Strasburg and she was in Lititz. However, they did meet at a 4-H roller skating party and enjoyed many 4-H activities together.

Their four children also enjoyed the benefits of 4-H. They are: Rob, 31; Debbie, 29; Kim, 28; and Jack, 24. Debbie lives to Boston, with the other three living in the Lancaster area. Each of the children had dairy animals, and the girls took sewing projects as well.

Evelyn traveled to Penn State as a 4-H'er with a demonstration on the color wheel, and finds it amusing that she was learning warm and cool colors in her youth. She says, "It was an excellent experience, and I still use that information. "One of her projects was home improvement, in which she slip covered a chair.

Frankly, she says the many skills she learned in sewing are valuable to her still and are skills she never had a chance to learn elsewhere. "We didn't have home economics in school, so I learned to sew on buttons and darn in 4-H."

Although she "never had any champions" among her many steer projects, she did experience showing at the Farm Show and was first in her class one year.

Today, Evelyn is a 4-H leader with the Lampeter Guys and Gals Club, which has about 50 members. Evelyn is a cooking leader and enjoys giving back to the program some of the same enthusiasm and encouragement her leaders gave her. That club is somewhat unique in that it has already organized for the year and has begun meeting, and will conclude before school is finished. Evelyn points out that is their answer to declining enrollments, and difficulties with summer jobs, family vacations and other obstacles in the summer.

The 4-H program has changed a lot since her days as a 4-H'er. "Then, the extension leader came to every meeting. They were the leaders and 4-H leaders helped," Evelyn recalls. She remembers her cooking clubs meeting in the leaders farm home, with 4-H'ers scattered throughout the house and in the yard. They were all "neighborhood girls," and Evelyn says, "We rode bicycles or walked to the meetings." They met at the home of Ben Sheaffer, with Jean Newcomer also serving as leader.

"I can't imagine a life without 4-H socially," Evelyn says. "It was very important then. But now kids have many other involvements." She said a big change is that when she was a member, 4-H carried a higher importance. "It was a priority in our live." Now it sometimes gets second or third choice in the busy lives of youngsters.

She also notes that there are far more younger members than when she was in the club. "There aren't that many members who stay in after 15. Many have summer jobs, and there's also girls' softball. That's a change of the times."

The project variety is now much wider than when she was a member, something Evelyn feels is necessary. "4-H has to change to hold interest." She notes the increased popularity of cake decorating and other crafts, and the decreased interest in sewing within her own club.

Evelyn says she continues as a leader because, "I feel very strongly about it. I think it's helpful. It's a big advantage, and it's the least I can do." While Evelyn serves as a leader because for her own experiences, she said her club has many non-4-H leaders, who simply volunteer because they want their children to have the experience.

Having lived on a farm for the first 25 years of married life, Evelyn is used to hard work. She helped to milk the dairy herd, something she enjoyed doing. Today she fills half her days with driving school bus for Lampeter Strasburg School District. In the beginning of her 20th year as a driver, Evelyn continues to enjoy the contact with the children.

Evelyn is a member of Farm Women #28, and has served as president. She is active in the Neffsville Mennonite Church, and can often be found helping in the nursery during their mothers' programs each week. With her husband in real estate, Evelyn also does much bookwork at her desk.

As she continues to serve her community, she is constantly reminded of the importance 4-H played in her life and puts to use skills learned as a 4-H'er.

Darvin Boyd

a member of the winning state judging team. "Those were great experiences," he recalls.

Just as large a thrill came to him 20 years later in 1981 when he was selected as one of eight National 4-H Alumni winners and traveled with his wife and two of his children to Chicago again. "I felt the same excitement as an alumni. 4-H was such an important part of my background. It was a gratifying experience," he states.

"In 4-H you truly learn by doing. There were so many things I learned from my projects, participation and competition. They were all invaluable to me as I went through school and into my vocation. I learned so much more than what I learned just through projects."

Boyd notes, "It is the total involvement, getting to know other members, and learning to speak and articulate. 4-H offers many opportunities for leadership and for program planning."

Following graduation from Delaware Valley College in 1964, Boyd went to Korea in yet another 4-H program, the International 4-H Youth Exchange program. He recalls, "It was a fabulous experience. After living with five families in six months, with no electricity, no flush toilets, and sleeping on the floor as they do, I did not consider it a hardship. I learned that they share the same aspirations for peace and an enjoyable family life as we do.

"That was my first intercultural experience and it made me appreciate the importance of more international programs to promote better world understanding."

It was a start for Boyd, and after returning to the United States and getting a masters degree in public administration from Penn State, he and his wife Linda went back to Korea with the American Korean Foundation to promote rural development, including establishing 4-H programs. Boyd explained that he helped develop a rural training center which brought together 4-H'ers from all parts of Korea for a four-week course.

He said, "We taught them the importance of patriotism, community development and their contributions to their communities. We also taught them the technical aspects of agriculture, such as soil testing, and nutrition of livestock." The girls were taught home economics as well.

When they returned to their homes, the young people were given project assistance and the support they needed to learn to keep records, and to be responsible for caring for their animals. Through this program, the Foundation supported thousands of Korean young people.

Darvin says he has no doubt that his having lived 4-H for years helped him have an impact on that developing country. "This was very valuable to that country in its earlier stages of development," he remarked.

After six years with the Foundation the Boyds returned to Akron and he worked in Harrisburg as the executive director of the health and welfare committee in the House of Representatives. He did analyses of legislation, studied the welfare system, and in general found the work very rewarding.

After three years he resigned from that job to seek the Republican nomination for congressman in the 16th district. Although he lost that 12-way race, he said he learned a lot from the experience. He had felt qualified for the congressional seat because of his international interests. "From the beginning I knew the odds were not great that I would win, but I felt I had the experience and I was confident I could do the job."

He gives the impression that he is happy in whatever he is doing, and says flatly, "I really enjoy what I'm doing."

Working with agricultural loans is not easy with the present economy, but Boyd says realistically, "The last five years have been difficult times for agriculture, but I think we're starting to turn the corner. I think we'll start to see the silver lining around the clouds. There are still challenges in the next few years, but I think we've bottomed out."

For Boyd, every day is a good one. He says, "I like working with people in agriculture and in this part of the country. It is a real pleasure. They have a strong work ethic, a simple life, and understand the importance of family. Such important characteristics give more meaning to life."

Boyd himself is firmly committed to family life as the father of three children - Kevin, 11; Cindy, 7; and Brian, 3. He said he feels strongly the need to be available to nurture children.

He also has a strong commitment to the community, and serves as moderator of the Ephrata Church of the Brethren, now in his second three year term.

In somewhat of a departure from agriculture, he is a member of the Lancaster City-County Human Relations Commission, which

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It is beginning to look like spring around our farm. There are two ring-necked pheasants that roam around our house and through our brown garden everyday. Yesterday I saw 30 wild geese on the river in front of our house and our own white geese are starting to nest. I've been using the first eggs in cakes and custards as it is a bit early to start goslings.

My tulips and hyacinths are several inches high on a southern slope and even the poppies are sending up fuzzy green leaves. I've forced some forsythia and pussy willow branches and put them on the kitchen counter.

And, scattered around my yard are twigs and small branches from the walnut and persimmon trees. However, the weather will have to get a bit warmer before I am enticed to go out and rake the whole yard again.

Whenever I go outside my tiger cat is always at my feet. She follows me into the cellar when I fill the Furnace with coal and she sits on the kitchen windowsill every morning and begs for food. We cannot understand what happened to our two Manx cats as they simply disappeared. One was black and white and the next generation was a bright orange. Maybe a hunter shot them since they did roam through our woodland.

As I write this, workmen are pounding away in our bathroom as they lay new linoleum. We are expecting house guests and a torn up floor would not be a nice welcome. I'm certainly hoping that another pipe doesn't spring a leak in the near future.

Even though there are signs of spring here in Lancaster County, I'm sincerely expecting that spring will be in full swing in New Orleans. That is where I expect to be when you read this article. You'll hear more about my Southern Tour later.

Chester County seeks dairy princess candidates

GAP — Chester County has begun its annual search for dairy princess candidates, who will compete during a contest on May 31.

All single young women between the ages of 16 and 22 who have a dairy farm background are eligible to compete for the title of 1986 Chester County Dairy princess.

Contestants must be the daughter of a dairy farmer in Chester County or own at least one dairy animal herself. She must have completed her junior year in high school and will not turn 22 before Dec. 31.

The dairy princess will be selected by a panel of three judges. The judges base their decisions on appearance, speaking ability, poise, personality and knowledge of the dairy industry. She must also present a three to five minute presentation promoting dairy products.

The winner of the Chester County contest will attend a training seminar July 8 to 10 and compete in the state dairy princess pageant in Harrisburg, Sept. 18 through 20.

Young women interested in entering the Chester County pageant should contact Charlene Ranck at 442-9008, Cathy Guest at 215-469-6627; or George Lamborn, 215-932-3305 before April 30.

Dress your St. Patrick's Day meals in green!

Get out your green because Monday is St. Patrick's Day! Even if you're not Irish, you won't want to be caught without at least a bit of green in your attire.

And while you are in the Irish spirit, dress up your St. Patrick's Day meal with a favorite Irish stew or a green salad.

Below are a few ideas to get you started. Mrs. Kitty Wagner, a frequent recipe contributor, shares her Irish stew recipe. Her grandmother came from Cork, Ireland, so she'll certainly be showing off her green Monday.

Other ideas include a Shamrock Coffee Cake dressed up with green icing and a colorful Pear Lime Delight from Mrs. Wilmer Martin.

SHAMROCK COFFEE CAKE

3½ to 4 cups enriched flour
2 packages dry yeast
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1 egg, room temperature
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup raisins

Sift together 2 cups flour and yeast. Heat milk, sugar, oil and salt until 120°F. to 130°F. Stir to blend. Add to flour mixture and beat until smooth, about 2 minutes. Blend in egg and 1 cup flour; beat 1 minute more. Stir in enough remaining flour to make a stiff dough. Turn onto lightly floured surface and knead until smooth and satiny — 8 to 10 minutes.

Shape into a ball; place in greased bowl; turn to grease all sides.

Cover, let rise in warm place (85°F.) until double, about 90 minutes. Punch down; let rest 10 minutes. Divide dough and shape each half into shamrock as follows:

Roll each half into 5x22-inch rectangle; brush with melted butter. Sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon mixed. Top with raisins. Begin with 22-inch edge; roll up like jelly roll. Seal edge. Flatten roll slightly. Cut each roll into 3 6-inch pieces and a 4-inch piece. Fold 6-inch piece in half lengthwise and cut each from folded end to within ½ inch of center.

On greased baking sheet, lay each roll open to form petals of shamrock. Place 4-inch piece at base of petals to form stem. Let rise in warm place until doubled, about 45 minutes. Bake at 375°F. for 20 to 25 minutes. Frost with tinted green icing.

PEAR LIME DELIGHT

2 3-ounce packages lime gelatin
6 ounces cream cheese, softened
1 pound can pears, well drained
2 cups boiling water
2 cups cold water

Dissolve gelatin in 2 cups boiling water as per package directions. Add 2 cups cold water. Place half of mixture in an 8x10-inch casserole dish and refrigerate until firm. Put remaining mixture in blender. Add the cream cheese and mix until cream cheese is blended thoroughly. Drain pears well and cut into small chunks. Place pear chunks on top of firm gelatin. Pour cream cheese and gelatin mixture on top. Chill 4 to 6 hours until firm.

IRISH STEW

2½ to 3 pounds lamb
4 medium onions
4 large potatoes
4 carrots
4 ribs celery
Salt and pepper
2 cups water
2 tablespoons vinegar

Trim fat from meat. Cut into chunks. Peel and quarter onions. Peel and quarter potatoes; cut carrots and celery in half. Mix all together and season well with salt and pepper. Put in casserole and pour water and vinegar over all. Cover tightly and cook in 325°F. oven 2 hours. Avoid stirring, but shake casserole from time to time to prevent stew from sticking. Long, slow cooking is essential to good Irish stew.

Evelyn Hess, outgoing president of the Lancaster Farm and Home Foundation board of directors, offers the following recipe which she received from a friend at her church. She says the recipe is nice for brunch and is very versatile. It is just as good when reheated, especially in a microwave.

To learn more about Evelyn and her 4-H experiences, see this week's Homestead Notes on page B2.

QUESTION - Mrs. Galen Gockley, Mohnton, would like a recipe for Johnnycake.

ANSWER - Mrs. Juliana Hussmann, Mohrsville, asked for a recipe for a cream of broccoli soup. Thanks go to Judy Shade, Alex., PA, for the following recipe.

Cream of Broccoli Soup

- 4 cups fresh chopped broccoli
- 2 tablespoons instant chicken flavor bouillon, or 6 chicken bouillon cubes
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- Cheese, optional
- ½ cup onion
- 3 cups water
- 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
- ¼ cup butter
- ¼ cup flour
- 2 cups milk or light cream

In large saucepan, combine broccoli, onion, water, bouillon and garlic powder. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 15 minutes or until broccoli is tender. Blend in blender ⅓ at a time. Return to saucepan. Set aside. In medium pan, melt butter, stir in flour and pepper until smooth. Stir in milk; cook until thick. Add broccoli mixture and cheese if desired. Heat but do not boil. Makes 1½ quarts.

ANSWER - Mrs. W. Bishop, Landisburg, asked for no-cook Easter candy recipes other than peanut butter and coconut cream. While the following recipe, submitted by Linda Rentschler, Kutztown, is an egg, it's a little different from the traditional peanut butter Easter egg

Peanut-Rolled Eggs

- 1 pound confectioner's sugar
- ¼ cup evaporated milk
- 1 pound dark chocolate coating wafers
- ¼ pound softened butter, do not use margarine
- 1 pound crushed peanuts

Combine the first 3 ingredients, until you can shape into desired egg sizes (if the dough is not wet enough, add a little more milk). While you shape the dough into eggs, have your chocolate melting in the top of a double boiler. When chocolate is ready, dip the eggs into the chocolate and then quickly roll in the crushed peanuts. Place peanut rolled eggs on a sheet of waxed paper to dry.

ANSWER - Anna Jeanette Kannoda, Monongahela, asked for a good steam pudding recipe. Thanks go to Kitty Wagner, Elizabethtown, for the following recipe.

Steamed Date Pudding

- ½ cup melted shortening
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1½ cups pitted dates, chopped
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ cup chopped walnuts (black are best)
- 1 cup brown sugar, packed
- 1½ cups sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Combine shortening, sugar, and eggs. Stir in dates. Fold dry ingredients into egg mixture with rind and nuts. If pudding seems too dry, add 1 to 2 tablespoons milk. Fill 8 greased individual molds ⅔ full. Steam on rack with 1 inch hot water in covered kettle 1 hour. Serve warm with Fluffy Hard Sauce.

Fluffy Hard Sauce

- ½ cup butter
- 1 egg yolk, beaten
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 cups sifted confectioner's sugar
- 1 egg white, stiffly beaten

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg yolk and vanilla. Beat well. Fold egg white into mixture Serve at room temperature.

Home Made Candy Easter Eggs

Today's recipe for Easter eggs came to me from a friend's aunt. This delicious candy has become an Easter tradition in our family. If you try them, they just might be a new tradition in yours.

The butter cream filling is very versatile, you can add your own favorite ingredients and flavors. For instance, add cocoa powder and chopped nuts for chocolate nut filling; or chopped dried fruit and nuts for fruit and nut eggs. Well drained crushed pineapple and coconut will give you tropical eggs.

When inventing your own fillings, keep the ingredients dry, so the filling will be firm enough to shape. If it gets too soft, add more confectioner's sugar; if it becomes too crumbly, add a little milk.

The high sugar content in the filling keeps the eggs from spoiling, so refrigeration is not necessary. The eggs can be frozen or refrigerated if desired, but the cold temperatures may streak or spot the chocolate coating.

Auntie Ann's Easter Eggs

Butter Cream Filling:

1 stick butter or margarine
1 8-ounce package cream cheese
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 teaspoon salt
3 pounds (3 boxes) confectioner's sugar
Milk, as needed
Flavorings (choose one of these):
3 cups shredded coconut
3 cups creamy peanut butter (soften in microwave for easier mixing)

1. Unwrap butter and cream cheese and place on a small plate. Microwave on medium low (30,3,defrost) for 1 to 1½ minutes until soft but not melted.

2. Combine softened butter, cream cheese, vanilla, and salt in mixer bowl. Beat until light and fluffy. Stir in 2½ to 3 pounds sugar, mixing thoroughly. Filling should be stiff and firm, but still creamy. It should not be crumbly or sticky. If it is too crumbly, add milk, 1 tablespoon at a time until creamy. If filling is too sticky, add more confectioner's sugar until no longer sticky.

3. For butter cream eggs, use filling as is. For other flavors, add flavoring desired and mix until thoroughly blended. Mix or knead by hand if your mixer is not powerful enough to handle the filling.

4. Shape into eggs and place on wax paper lined cookie sheet. Recipe makes 3 to 4½ pounds filling, depending on flavoring added. This makes 6 to 9 large (about ½ pound) eggs, or more of a smaller size. (Small eggs are much easier to dip!)

Tips:

— If you want to make several different flavored eggs, divide butter cream filling in half or thirds, and reduce amount of flavoring accordingly.

— Store eggs at room temperature until dipping. If eggs are too cold, chocolate may get grey streaks.

— Eggs are easier to dip if you let them set at room temperature overnight or for several hours before dipping.

Dark Chocolate Coating:

1 pound milk chocolate, such as 2 large candy bars
6 to 8 blocks unsweetened baking chocolate
2/3 "cake" paraffin (Paraffin usually comes in 1 pound boxes with 5 "cakes" in the box. Use 2/3 of one of these "cakes".)
Dipping tools or 2 forks and a large spoon

1. Break milk and baking chocolate into pieces in a dry 2-quart casserole or bowl. Shave paraffin into very small bits, and mix with chocolate.

2. Leave uncovered and microwave on medium (50,5) for 5 to 6 minutes, stirring well every two minutes, until paraffin melts and mixture is smooth and glossy. (See Tips below.)

3. Using a dipping tool or two forks to hold an egg, dip each egg in the chocolate. If the chocolate is not deep enough to cover the egg, set each egg, one at a time, down into the chocolate coating. Use a large spoon and quickly spoon chocolate over the top of the egg, until it is evenly coated. Using the spoon, lift one end of the egg slightly, so you can slip a fork under the middle of the egg to lift it out.

4. Let coated egg drip a few seconds over the dipping bowl, then place on a wax paper lined cookie sheet to harden. (To get the egg off the fork and onto the paper, set one end of the egg down on the paper. Using the tip of the second fork, hold the egg underneath the other end. This frees the fork in the middle so you can slip it out and let the egg settle down onto the paper.)

5. After eggs harden, place each egg on a small doily or a paper baking cup (cupcake size for large eggs, or 2-inch size for small eggs). Decorate tops if desired. Store, covered, at room temperature.

TIPS:

— For milk chocolate coating, omit the baking chocolate. Other directions remain the same.

— Make sure you use dry utensils, since water, even a drop or two, may make the chocolate dull and gummy.

— Chocolate usually holds its shape, even when melted, until you stir. Stir well before microwaving longer.

— Paraffin contains no moisture, so microwaves won't melt it. The heat from the melted chocolate will melt the paraffin, if it's in small enough pieces. If the chocolate melts but not all the paraffin is melted, stir mixture for several minutes until the paraffin melts. If necessary, microwave on medium a minute or two longer, but be careful not to overheat the chocolate.

— If chocolate cools too much while dipping, reheat on medium (50,5) for about a minute, then stir.

— Use extra chocolate for dipping pretzels, crackers, candy moulds, etc.

Use this quick icing to decorate the top of the eggs, if desired, using a decorating tip or bag. It becomes very hard.

Quick Decorative Icing

1 egg white
2 cups (about) sifted confectioner's sugar
Juice of ½ lemon, about 1½ tablespoons

1. Beat egg white until stiff. Gradually add 1 cup sugar and the lemon juice. Add additional sugar until you get a stiff icing. If using regular food coloring instead of the thicker paste colors, make the icing very stiff.

2. Divide in small bowls and stir in colorings desired. Cover with damp cloth until ready to use.

3. Pipe names, flowers, etc. on eggs as desired. Use different designs or colors to distinguish different flavored eggs. Let dry and harden before covering.

FFA plans spring 'branding' drive

ALEXANDRIA, VA — Members of FFA chapters across the nation will be visiting farms this spring to "brand" every tractor with a decal urging safe tractor operations in an attempt to save lives and prevent injuries.

FFA'ers, with the sponsorship of International Harvester Company and Case IH, will locate and "brand" tractors with a heart decal which reads: "Please be careful, we love you." It is signed, "Your family."

The campaign was initially the idea of Lena Schalow, a farm wife in Minnesota who lost her husband in a tractor accident.

Members will call on tractor dealers, farm supply stores and agricultural agencies for help in locating all tractor owners who will be contacted to arrange visits to brand every tractor possible on every farm, large or small.

Particular emphasis is being placed on older tractors, which are more vulnerable to accidents and on which rollover protective structures cannot be installed. These machines require extra care on the part of the operator.

Statistics show that each year more than 500 tractor operators lose their lives because of haste, fatigue or carelessness. Farmers will be given a tractor safety brochure at the time that decals are placed on their tractors to complete the impact of the safety message.

Each FFA chapter participating will receive an award from the National FFA, with special recognition for chapters with 100 percent membership participation.

China's pandas need bamboo, peace to survive

WASHINGTON – Can the panda be saved? Of course, says zoologist George B. Schaller. "All it needs is bamboo and peace."

Therein lie the difficulties facing China's giant panda. Hunting and destruction of its bamboo forest habitat have drastically shrunk the animal's range so that more than half of the estimated 1,000 survivors live in 12 reserves in southern China. And bamboo is becoming scarce and susceptible to die-offs that starve pandas.

Strangely, the panda prefers meat, and has the simple stomach and short intestines of a carnivore. But meat is hard for the relatively slow panda to obtain, and so it relies on bamboo – loads of it.

Eats Huge Volumes

Unable to digest bamboo's nutrients efficiently, a panda eats large volumes – 22 to 40 pounds of leaves and stems a day. When on a diet of bamboo shoots, which are 90 percent water, a panda may consume some 650 shoots weighing 85 pounds daily.

The tally of shoots was made by Schaller, director of Wildlife Conservation International, New York Zoological Society, as part of a five-year study by China and the World Wildlife Fund in Wolong Natural Reserve. The research team, led by Schaller and Hu Jinchu, radio-collared 11 pandas to track their activities.

Schaller and his wife, Kay, sometimes endured below-freezing winters in a two-person tent perched high on a ridge. Writing in the March issue of National Geographic, he recalls: "In the glow of a kerosene lantern I tune the receiver to Long-Long, a young male. He is on my right, downslope, active. I switch the radio frequency to Ning-Ning...Her signal is calm and consant, the animal momentarily at rest in a ravine not far from Long-Long..."

"Then I recline," writes Schaller, "waiting until it its time to contact the pandas again, each alone in that cold stillness, their coats the color of snow and the darkness between trees. I cannot imagine a loneliness deeper than theirs."

Despite daily expeditions, Schaller observed a panda only on the average of once a month. Over time he determined that the home range of a panda is very small, varying from 1.6 to 2.6 square miles, and is shared with other pandas.

Although the ranges of neighboring females may overlap, each has an area of about 75 to 100 acres in which other females do not seem welcome. Males may share ranges but avoid each other except when competing for females. The animals are active for an average of 14 hours a day, spending most of the time feeding.

Though the first live panda didn't reach the western world until 1936, pandas have been known in China for millennia. "The Classics of Sea and Mountains," a geography book dating back some 2,500 years, says that a "bearlike, black-and-white animal that eats copper and iron lives in the Qionglai Mountains south of Yandao County."

Chews Cooking Pots

The panda's reputation as an iron eater probably comes from incidents of entering villages and chewing up cooking pots. Pandas get their ability to chew metal–as well as tough bamboo–from massive jaws and broad molars. Teeth of fossil pandas 3 million years old are similar to those of today's animals, showing that the pact between panda and bamboo has existed probably as long as pandas have.

Bamboo foraging is aided by another feature–a unique sixth digit on the panda's forepaw that affords great dexterity.

Some traits work against pandas. Gestation is long, apparently because of delayed implantation of the fertilized egg. And when they do give birth, usually to two cubs, one cub generally is abandoned and left to die.

The nurturing of young pandas in the wild can be as mysterious and uncertain as births in captivity. Schaller and his colleagues observed a panda known as Zhen-Zhen mate in April 1981, and they later found she had made a den in the hollow base of a huge fir tree.

When the scientists approached the den in October, a startled Zhen-Zhen lumbered toward them, screaming. Later they heard an Sporting a radio collar fitted by scientists, a giant panda leaves a log trap in Wolong Natural Reserve in China's Sichuan Province. Scientists had weighed and measured the panda and then activated the collar so the animal could be monitored 24 hours a day. Some pandas were tracked more than a year.

Blanket Care

Blankets last longest and give the best service when they are kept clean. A clean blanket has a fluffy nap that traps warmth, and it is less likely to suffer insect damage than a soiled blanket.

Always read care instructions before cleaning a blanket. Some may specify drycleaning. Blankets that are labeled "handwash only" may be drycleaned. Electric blankets, on the other hand, can only be laundered; drycleaning damages the insulation on the wiring. Some wool blankets are specially treated for machine washability. When available, follow the laundry instructions on the care label for any blanket.

In general, washable blankets can be laundered in the following manner. Measure the length and width of a wool blanket. Pretreat spots or a soiled binding with a liquid detergent or a paste of water and granular detergent. Wash only one large blanket at a time.

Set the washer for a warm wash and cold rinse. After the washer has filled, add detergent. If a granular product is used, agitate to dissolve. Stop the washer and distribute the blanket loosely and evenly around the wash cycle. Let the water pump out and after a one minute spin, slowly advance the timer to the deep rinse. Rinse for one to two minutes and allow the washer to finish the wash cycle automatically.

A fabric softener may be used in the washer or dryer to help reduce static cling and make a blanket soft and fluffy.

Depending on the construction of the blanket, synthetics and those made of cotton can be washed on a permanent press cycle.

Dry a wool blanket on the high temperature setting. To absorb moisture and dry a blanket more quickly, place three or four dry towels in the dryer. Preheat the towels for three to five minutes. This helps absorb moisture, dry blankets rapidly and avoid pilling caused by long tumbling. Place the blanket in the dryer with the warm towels. Set dryer control for about twenty minutes. Check the blanket after ten minutes. Remove while still slightly damp to avoid shrinkage.

Place blanket on flat surface or over two lines to finish drying. Stretch the blanket to it original shape. When the blanket is completely dry, brush gently to raise nap. Press binding with a cool iron, if needed.

Synthetic blankets and those made of cotton may be dried using the permanent press cycle and temperature. Use highest heat setting if the dryer has no permanent press setting. Dry completely; do not overdry to avoid wrinkling. Remove blanket from dryer as soon as the machine stops.

For line drying, hang a blanket over two parallel lines. Smooth and straighten edges. When partially dry, change the position and straighten.

Techniques For Discount Shopping

Bargain bins, five minute specials, and buying fever can cost you a bundle if you are not prepared when buying clothes at discount stores.

Be a cool customer and a wise consumer, you need to be well armed with a list of what you need and how much you can afford to spend. Once you have these, here are a few extra survival techniques that may protect you from costly impulse buying.

- Don't go unless you are prepared to buy. What you see today may be gone tomorrow. If you intend to use a check or credit card note store policy before you buy.
- Shop when you feel full of energy and are looking good. Be prepared for a little crowding, allow more time than you ordinarily would, and expect delays at the check-out line.
- Go dressed for easy changes so you're prepared to try on everything you select before you actually buy. There are many reasons items are sold at discount and it's up to you to decide if a flaw is worth the price.
- Make a quick tour of the store before you begin to select in earnest. Some stores are organized as a series of boutiques and not all of what you are looking for will be in the same place. Often best buys are in a backroom or on a separate rack.
- Look over garments carefully and don't depend entirely on sizing tags – clothes may be improperly marked. Look for tears, irregular stitching and coloring, broken zippers, and stains.
- If you've found something you like, have tried it on and like the style, fabric and fit, carry it around with you for a few minutes while you look further. A second look at something you've selected may save you from an "almost" good bargain.

infant squawk.

After Zhen-Zhen and her infant abandoned the den, Schaller found a nest made of wood dust and a few twigs. Piled at the entrance were droppings and several logs the mother panda had hauled in. Equally puzzling was a five-foot fir sapling placed upright in the den.

Unexplained Loss

Somehow Zhen-Zhen lost her infant that winter, and later another of her offspring vanished, its fate unknown.

Adult pandas are at risk too. In the mid-1970's much of the umbrella bamboo in northern Sichuan flowered and died, causing at least 138 pandas to starve to death. Then, in 1983, a flowering of arrow bamboo in central Sichaun threatened pandas there, and some had to be rescued and relocated.

Pandas also die in snares set for muskd deer. Poaching is the second biggest cause of their deaths, after habitat destruction.

Concern for their survival has led to creation of the Research Centre for the Protection of the Giant Panda and Its Ecosystem, in the Wolong Reserve. It includes a veterinary hospital and a nursery. China and the World Wildlife Fund also plan a detailed panda census and bamboo survey to help manage "China's living treasure."

York Extension offers safe water clinic

YORK – Concerned about the quality of your drinking water? If you depend on your own well or spring, you should be.

"The quality of water from a private supply is the responsibility of its owner," says Dr. William Sharpe, water resource specialist at Penn State University. "If you don't test your water, no one else will."

Drinking contaminated water can be a health risk, Sharpe points out. "The Safe Drinking Water Act established standards for water quality. If water doesn't meet those standards, it could cause problems for those drinking it." As an example, he notes that water with high levels of lead can retard the mental development of children who drink it.

To insure that your water is safe to drink, you should have it tested periodically at a certified water-testing laboratory. Sharpe recommends that water be tested for bacteria and nitrates at least once a year and for other chemicals at least every three years.

In addition to potential health problems, poor quality water can have other negative effects. "Water contaminated with iron can cause staining problems, and water with a low pH can corrode pipes," says Sharpe.

On March 25 residents of York County will have an opportunity to learn about managing their water supplies. Dr. Sharpe and other water quality experts will speak and be available for consultation at the "Safe Drinking Water Clinic" to be held at the York County 4-H Center in Bair. The clinic is free and advanced registration isn't necessary.

The program will run from 1 to 3 p.m. and be repeated at 7 to 9 p.m. For more information contact the York County Cooperative Extension Service at 757-9657.

Agriculture is twenty years behind nutritional guidelines established by the USDA

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

SCHAEFFERSTOWN — The government issued dietary guidelines twenty years ago and agriculture has been trying to catch up ever since.

Dr. Audrey Maretski, State Leader of Family Living Programs for the Penn-State Cooperative Extension Service, made this point in her presentation on nutritional policy and agriculture at the annual meeting of the Lebanon County Cooperative Extension Service Tuesday.

Dr. Maretski described U.S. agriculture as trying to get in front of the nutritional and wellness parade. She noted, "The relation between nutrition and agriculture production could have been addressed 20 years ago, and should have been addressed 10 years ago."

In the past 20 years dietary advice has been published by such institutions as the heart association, the cancer society, the USDA and HHS. Dr. Maretski explained that agriculture should have acted at that time.

These recommendations were related to maintaining ideal body weight, reducing total fat, reducing cholesterol, increasing complex carbohydrates and increasing fiber.

The recent guidelines issued by the USDA have changed slightly on the issue of body weight Dr. Maretski explained. In 1980 the guide was listed as maintaining ideal body weight. This was altered in the 1985 report to maintaining desirable body weight Dr. Maretski commented.

It is these guidelines, she explained that the American public is using "in regards to dietary modifications."

Dr. Maretski continued that since many consumers feel they are well informed and feel they have control over their health and diets, they are willing to utilize the guides.

Today's consumer finds words like freshness, purity and light attractive, and will shun artificial colors and flavors Dr. Maretski pointed out. Also she noted, many marketers are responding to these concerns. They are developing products that have reduced calories and fat, and increased fruit and fiber.

According to Dr. Maretski, a Cornell study on ways to bring nutrition and agriculture together made several research recommendations. She mentioned four of the recommendations: a study of the biological availability of nutrients in food, a study of how and why anticarcenogens in certain foods work, a study on removal methods of cholesterol from eggs and milkfat, and a study on the rumen's bacteriological content to modify the fatty acid content of milk.

Dr. Maretski demonstrated that the trends in food consumption verify the consumer's desire for more fruit and fiber, and a decrease in sugar, fat and starch.

An understanding of and response to the markets is very important Dr. Maretski concluded since if you don't understand and repond, others will lead.

In other business, Denis Hoke presented the Lebanon County Master Farmer, Roy Alger. Alger is a dairyman from Palmyra. There he and his family farm 900 acres and milk 81 registered Holsteins.

Dr. Audrey Maretski explained how nutritional policy effects agriculture at the annual Lebanon County Extension banquet.

Alger has served as president of the Mt. Joy Farmer's Cooperative for the past 12 years. He also serves as a director for API.

The Pennsylvania 4-H Alumni Award this year went to Ed Arnold. Arnold is presently in his second term as a Lebanon County Commissioner. He also works part-time on his family's dairy farm.

He is the Commissioner's Liaison to the Lebanon County 4-H Extension Board, and serves as president of SETCO which is a four county training and jobs program.

The election of officers results are: president, Mike Firestine; vice president, Hershey Bare; secretary, Alvena Kneasel; and treasurer, Karen Sellers.

Ed Arnold was presented the 4-H Alumni Award at the Lebanon County Extension Banquet. He is currently a county commissioner and a part-time dairyman.

Workshop for disabled joins handicapped, rehabilitation specialists

BY SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Staff Correspondent

FREDERICK, MD — The second annual Mid-Atlantic Workshop for Disabled Individuals and Their Families in Rual and Agricultural Communities was held in Frederick County, MD, at the Sheraton Inn, March 7 and 8.

The workshop, funded by the University of Maryland, brought disabled individuals together with vocational rehabilitation specialists, counselors, extension agents, and many other resource persons, all interested in recognizing the plight of disabled individuals and exchanging information.

Dr. Gary Smith, farm safety specialist at the University of Maryland, coordinated the program's activities. "We think we have a great program," he said, "with emphasis on rural and agricultural aspects."

Faith Kirk, executive director of the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, added, "There is a dire need for information. It is a population that has not been easy to get to. Many times they don't know what is available. We're here to determine what we can do to facilitate."

The two-day workshop featured a variety of topics presented by representatives of various agencies. A panel discussion entitled "Lifestyle of Maryland" seemed to have the greatest impact on the audience. The panel, comprised of George Moyer, Pennsylvania dairy farmer; Ben Haines and Jack Crum, Maryland dairy farmers; and Elisabeth Hudson, North Carolina homemaker, candidly discussed and fielded questions about adjustments to their physicl disabilities.

George Moyer, who milks 100 cows in Myerstown, Pa., said that he remembers the day he lost his leg better than his own birthday. In the fall of 1975 he had been harvesting corn when the machine clogged. With the machine at full throttle, he climbed onto it to push the corn through. He slipped, felt a tug at his lef, and jumped to the ground with only a stump remaining where his left leg had been.

He said, "I go many places and people don't even know I have a wooden leg. Sometimes I have to prove it." Moyer then removed his prosthesis and held it in the air for all to witness. He said that he tells children that he has to stand it in the corner when he goes to bed; otherwise, "it would walk right around all night looking for me."

Moyer said the most important aspect of adjusting to living with a physical disability is to be receptive to the vocational rehabilitation programs available. He added, "I'm crippled, but I'm not handicapped."

Twenty years ago, Ben Haines of Rising Sun, Md., lost his leg in a silage auger. "While I was still caught in the machine, I thought, it's got one leg, land that's all it's getting." Haines elected to phase out of the dairy business, but continued in farm related fields. He helped design a cover shield with the manufacturer of his auger and now serves the Delmarva peninsula with equipment sales. He also loads and hauls grain and lime. "I can drive any piece of machinery going." He said that his truck has no special adaptions.

Jack Crum of Walkersville, Md., milks 300 cows. "It never crossed my mind to give up farming," he said. He lost his hand while sharpening the knives on a field chopper. Crum said that he is "blessed with an attitude," with regard to his physical disability. "It's typical of farmers to adjust because nothing goes the same every day. From the very beginning I had to think and be innovative. I go with that."

Karen Mills, a counselor with the Maryland Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, addressed the process of rehabilitation for victimsof "the second most hazardous profession." Mills said, "The biggest problems are knowing what resources are available, plus the transportation getting to them. It's one of the best kept secrets around," said Mills of the Vocational Rehabilitation Process. She then outlined the five-step procedure for acquiring services.

Mills said that referrals start at the hospital, then the first step is to fill out forms and discuss the client's rights. Step 2 provides the client with free, comprehensive medical, psychological and vocational evaluations. Step 3 involves counseling, physical restoration and training, depending upon the individual's abilitites and interests. Step 4 provides the client with job readiness skills, placement and any special equipment that may be needed. Finally, step 5 is employment and follow-up.

Mills said that, through local resources, "We can help coordinate these for you."

K. Marc Teffeau, extension faculty member of the University of Maryland, said that disabled

Home adaptations make life easier for wheelchair confined handicapped

BY SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Staff Correspondent

FREDERICK, MD — There was a time when Elisabeth Hudson though she would die and hoped that she would. She described the pain that she experiences every waking moment: "It's like I'm on fire all the time." Hudson suffered deterioration of the spine and became paralyzed after cobalt treatments.

The middle-aged homemaker said her brother helped her to see that she could live in spite of her disabling condition. He encouraged her to live one day at a time.

Reflecting on that day, Hudson said she decided she could stand the pain "for a minute, and for a minute after that." She learned to manage her pain through humor and diversion.

She said she cultivated cheerfulness "until it became a part of me. I could put my pain at the back of my attention and distract myself." Now, Hudson is full of life, with her exuberance and cheerfulness spilling over to affect everyone who comes to know her.

At the second annual Mid-Atlantic Workshop for Disabled Individuals and Their Families in Rural and Agricultural Communities, Hudson shared the adaptions that were made to her home of 28 years in Charlotte, N.C., to accomodate her wheelchair confinement. A tour of her home through a slide presentation revealed many novel ideas that could make the lives of other disabled people more convenient.

A ramp with railings and a curb (to prevent mishaps) leads the way to the front door which bears three handles, including one on the hinge side to make closing the door behind her easier. To the right of the entrance is her lowered mailbox and an intercom. Hudson said she can talk to her visitors from her bedroom or even from the bathroom. "But," she added, "you might have to wait."

A peephole at her eye level is designed with mirrors, "so as not to look into the caller's beltbuckle." Hudson seemed quite proud of her arm-controlled sewing machine, which she said is very easy to use.

To accompany the machine, she has a half-sized ironing board for pressing quilt pieces and pillow tops. A vinyl lap tray provides the writer with a smooth, sturdy surface upon which she can compose her informative pieces, eat dinner, or even put flea powder on the cat. "Then I turn it upside down," she added.

Throughout the attractive home is plenty of space to turn her wheelchair and roll out onto the L-shaped deck. Along the deck railing, the avid gardener has 38 feet of planter space in addition to the many containers that sit on the deck filled with shade-loving plants.

Of the adaptions made to her home, Hudson said many were inexpensive, and "some of the best were free."

Elisabeth Hudson is a model of independence and self-sufficiency for other disabled people, and an inspiration for everyone. "My friends are tremendously important," said Hudson. "You have to have patience with yourself and it helps to have a sense of humor.

ındivuals in rural communities face a multi-faceted problem. "There is not a central focus," he said of the information available. He sees the need for a "clearinghouse for information."

This 'Shepherd of the Year' isn't sheepish anymore

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANDISVILLE — Ellen Lewis just wanted a sheep for a pet. That was in 1980.

Five years later, "a sheep" has become a breeding flock of 25 Hampshire ewes with, at last count, 30 lambs.

On the family's five-acre farmette near Landisville there's a new 44-by-40 sheep barn.

Anchoring the fireplace hearth is a silver trophy proclaiming Ellen the Lancaster 4-H Woolies' 'Shepherd of the Year.'

There's also a large cardboard carton overflowing with newpaper clippings and a rainbow of show ribbons. When Ellen Lewis does something, she does it right. Which, in the terminology of livestock producers, seems to be a heritable trait.

Although Ellen's father, George Lewis, had no previous experience with sheep, he is a veteran of the 4-H program. While growing up in New York State, George parlayed an interest in poultry into some successful 4-H projects. His career undoubtedly peaked in the late 1940's, when his rooster placed first in the Madison Square Garden poultry show. "He won a powerful big prize of $3," George chuckles.

So when Ellen decided that she wanted to have a sheep, Dad decided that she ought to do it Lewis-fashion.

To start out in the right direction, Ellen and her father spent some time with well-known Lancaster County Hampshire breeders, Clyde and Dorothy Brubaker, who live nearby. "One Sunday we went over there and we talked all afternoon," Ellen recalls. "I remember him (Clyde) telling me that all you need to do is feed them right and give them some TLC."

Ellen joined the Woolies in 1980, the first year that the club separated from the county beef club. It was not until the following year that she entered show competition and found out that success in the showring depended on her fitting ability, in addition to feed and TLC.

She estimates that it takes about three hours of trimming to ready a sheep for the ring. That's in addition to the hour required to wash and dry, the sheep which, "is a good way to use all your old bath towels," she notes.

Since kicking off her show career in 1981, Ellen's combination of fitting, food and TLC has proven to be a winning formula. Her first show sheep, a Hampshire ewe purchased from the Brubakers, got off to a strong start by taking top honors in the 1981 Manheim Fair, then going on to be named champion breeding sheep at the county roundup. Annabelle finished the show season in characteristic style by taking reserve champion Hampshire ewe honors at the 1982 Farm Show.

In addition to maintaining an ambitious show schedule, Ellen's famous ewe starred on the local television station's program, "Rise and Shine," and joined the cast of a church Christmas musical. "That sheep acted just like an old ham," recalls Ellen's mother, Lorraine. "Ellen used to take her out without a lead and she'd be six inches from her hip pocket."

In fact, in those early years, Ellen confesses that she was much more sheepish than her sheep. "When I first went into 4-H I was really shy," she says, pointing out that the 4-H program has been responsible for helping her to overcome her inability to talk to people, which, in turn, has resulted in many new friendships. Ellen also credits 4-H with helping her to develop the self-discipline necessary to properly care for livestock.

Although her breeding sheep projects have spanned five years, it wasn't until last year that Ellen took on a market lamb project. "I

The ewe that started it all: Annabelle, Ellen Lewis's first show prospect, has dropped out of the limelight to produce more prize winning lambs for the Lewis flock.

When you happen to be the smallest lamb in a competitive set of Hampshire triplets, you've got to take a meal wherever you can find it. Four-day-old Pee Wee isn't complaining.

City club swims into 4-H with goldfish project

BY SUZANNE KEENE

LANCASTER — As the late afternoon sunlight filters through the frosted windows of the Lancaster girl's club, a group of 4-H'ers listens as 4-H agent Zoann Parker describes the essential ingredients plants need to grow.

Later in the meeting, they will carefully tuck cuttings of Wandering Jew and piggyback plants into soil-filled Styrofoam cups. And, amid considerable excitement, they will wrap their newly-planted treasures carefully in newspaper to take home.

While this may sound like a routine 4-H meeting, it isn't. The youngsters are not the typical farm kids usually associated with 4-H; they are city children who had never seen seeds or transplanted a plant until they started attending 4-H meetings.

This city 4-H club is the brainchild of Lancaster Extension 4-H Agent Zoann Parker, who says, "I'd drive by and see these kids sitting around with nothing to do."

So, with characteristic energy and enthusiasm, Zoann announced that a new 4-H club would be meeting in the girl's club and invited the kids to join.

When no one showed for the first meeting, Zoann refused to be discouraged. She picked up the goldfish that were to be the club's first project and walked around the girl's club asking if anyone was interested in obtaining one of the shiny fish.

Before too long, she had attracted enough kids to start a meeting, and the city club was off to a shaky beginning.

The idea behind the goldfish project, which Zoann wrote herself, was to keep the kids coming back week after week. Through earlier experiences, Zoann had learned that attendance was often spotty at city club meetings. To encourage regular attendance, she would distribute only one week's worth of goldfish food at each meeting. To get the next week's supply, the 4-H'ers had to attend the meeting.

In her search for a project to start the club, Zoann relied on her experiences as a 4-H'er. "I've always loved animals and that's how I learned responsibility." Knowing the limited resources she had to work with and the environment the animal would be exposed to, Zoann turned to fish.

In order to obtain a goldfish, the 4-H'er had to attend three meetings. When this requirement was fulfilled, she was presented with a quart jar bearing one goldfish and a week's supply of food.

Most of the fish died in a short time, Zoann reports. "When you put goldfish in a quart jar, they don't live very long." But early death was expected and she had warned the 4-H'ers that the fish wouldn't last long. "There was no pretense that they were going to live until they were 60," she said.

With the club established and the goldfish project behind them, the 4-H'ers moved on to other short-term projects like money management and plant cultivation.

Providing the kids with something tangible to take home every week has been important to maintaining membership, Zoann notes. For one project, the club looked at ways they could improve their home environment, then made "garbage" cans out of plastic buckets covered with contact paper.

As part of the money management project, the 4-H'ers made banks and are working at saving $3 to attend the 4-H Fair this summer. So far, her plan has worked and for the most part, the kids have been coming back.

Club member Tracy Dean said the reason she continues to attend meeting is "because it's fun." Her favorite 4-H activity so far, she reports, was a trip to a nearby greenhouse.

Fellow 4-H'er Shanda Lee, 8, agrees that the club is a lot of fun. Shanda says she learned about the club by watching a meeting and decided it was something she would enjoy.

(Turn to Page B17)

Members of a city 4-H club concentrate on getting their plants off to a good start.

Lancaster County 4-H Agent Zoann Parker shows a 4-H'er the tiny roots forming at the end of a cutting of Wandering Jew at a recent meeting of her city club.

'Shepherd of the Year'

never wanted to sell them for slaughter," she admits. Overcoming her reservations, Ellen took reserve champion honors at the 1984 Elizabethtown Fair with her purebred Hampshire market animal. She then went on to sweep that year's roundup, going home with both grand champion market lamb and supreme champion Hampshire ewe honors.

Although she admits that selling her market lamb entries doesn't seem to be getting any easier, Ellen has learned not to develop strong attachments to market animals.

Meanwhile, her success in breeding sheep shows continues. After her initial Farm Show win in 1982, Ellen rebounded by taking champion Hampshire ewe honors in both the 1985 and '86 Farm Show. With a new flock sire on board, the family hopes to maintain that momentum. Purchased from Bedinger Hampshires of Illinois, the young ram has sired all 30 of this year's lambs.

Thanks to Ellen and the 4-H program, sheep fever has proven to be infectious in the Lewis household. During lambing season, George often finds time to check for new arrivals during his lunch hour break from Farmers First Bank in Lititz. Although Ellen's four older brothers and sisters were members of the 4-H horse club, Ellen was the first to take an interest in sheep. Now her brother Ken, a Farm Credit employee, is also involved in the home flock.

Although Ellen has no definite career goals at this point, she does have an interest in the communications field. She also expects to continue her show career, hopefully entering the National Hampshire Show in the near future. And wherever life leads her, Ellen Lewis is sure to communicate her enthusiasm for sheep and the 4-H program.

City 4-H club

Zoann says she is pleased with the response to the club. "If they just keep coming, that's enough for me."

But she hopes the club will mature into what she terms a "traditional" club, with officers and long-term projects. She doesn't see this happening until some of the members, most of whom are between the ages of 8 and 13, get a little older and have a more solid committment to the club.

"I don't want to frustrate them," by pushing them too hard, Zoann says. For now the club is working. "They know me and what 4-H is," she says.

Future plans for the club include more fish (Zoann is incubating guppies, which are considerably hardier than goldfish), a trip to the County Park to search for signs of spring, and a firefly project.

Zoann would also like to have the club begin a citizenship project to learn how their community works. "There is a wealth of knowledge and learning and history within blocks of the girl's club," she says.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"Geese! Geese!" I run, shrieking, into the dairy barn.

Cynical due to my advancing age,- as I am constantly reminded by a pair of teenagers - I don't run, shrieking, about too many things any longer.

But geese? After a February packed in wall-to-wall clouds and dreariness, who wouldn't thrill to the faint, haunting honking, and a ragged, lopsided, "V" of floating shapes against a gray, early morning sky.

Spring? It starts this week, says the calendar. Announcement by geese is far more romantic than announcement via a terse phrase on a page of methodical square numbered blocks.

But this announcement by air is merely a symbol of seasonal restlessness. Time to be out and about, to let morning sunlight wash over the kitchen through the dusty stormdoor glass and rejoice in a gentle warm breeze.

The cats, too, are enjoying this peek at spring fever, rolling in the thick sawdust that mulches the floral border. Nature handled this mulch job, spreading the once-neat pile of wood residue over the farmstead by way of a wicked West wind that swept across the place like a prairie fire.

While the tulips are struggling up through the thick insulation, and the felines figure it was put there for their sole lounging pleasure under the remains of last year's chrysanthemum plants, I see the sawdust layer as a barrier to the April showers that are supposed to bring later return in blossoms. Off it must come.

The farmer stops by the house and insists he heard a robin singing somewhere. No fair - you have to see the robin for it to count in the spring-sights countdown.

Mom beat him already. She spied a large flock - like several dozen - of the feathered harbingers fresh in from the tropics on a morning that could best be described as chilly, gray and wintry.

Sort of makes you feel that you ought to rewrite that old cliche: "The early bird gets.....frostbite."

And muddy feet. For if spring brings the soft, fuzzy-gray pussywillows back on the bush so high I can't reach the best cutting stems, and a yellow cast to the willows storing up golden sunshine, and green spots dotting the bare, brown roadbank littered with old ugly leaves, likewise it brings mud.

Mud tracked through the milk house, just hosed down to sparkling concrete that would make the milk inspector proud. Mud tracked into the car carpet, where it breeds and reproduces like fungus to coat the rubber floor mats and burrow into carpet coils, never to be removed. Mud tracked across the basement indoor-outdoor floor covering, around the freezer and washing machine, up the stairs, through kitchen, living room, office, and wherever busy feet travel.

I long ago came to grips with mud. Mud does not freeze up cattle watering fountains, cause car and tractor batteries to roll over and play dead, nor send you skidding down a hill as you round a cold corner and hit a patch hiding in a shady spot on the pavement. Mud is a seasonal inconvenience, traded off for the likes of robins bursting in song and geese honking toward Canada.

And, our Eastern Shore farm friends surely rejoice, as do we, in the flight of the long-necked departing, feathered messengers of spring. For it is on their fields of tender shoots of wheat and barley that these spectacular, almost mystical, birds winter and grow fat for their long journey North. In return, they leave bare patches of field, covered amply with thank-you's of nitrogen rich droppings - but reduced yields of grain. Good for the soils - but hard on cash-flow economics.

To them, we say a hearty "Thanks" for fattening our V-formation spring announcement.

And what is symbolic to us, must surely be good riddance from their point of view.

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ — The New Jersey FFA is gearing up for the State Flower Show and Floral Design Contest on March 20 at the Quakerbridge Mall in Lawrenceville.

This contest is to encourage high school FFA members to develop skills in floriculture. The students' work will be on display at the mall on Thursday, March 20 through Saturday, March 22.

The Floral Design Contest is open to a team of four from each FFA chapter in New Jersey. This contest is sponsored by the New Jersey Florist's Association. Students will design a freestyle arrangement and an assigned arrangement, such as a centerpiece or symmetrical triangle. Students also compete in the State FFA Flower Show while at the mall.

Twenty-eight classes of floral arrangements are open to the FFA students. The show includes classes of silk and fresh designs of holiday, spring, wedding, and novelty arrangements. Wreaths, corsages, hanging baskets, planters and dish garden classes are included for student competition.

All arrangements and designs are prepared prior to the show. Designs are entered on Thursday for judging and remain on display at the mall until Saturday evening.

Conrad Weiser FFA

Berks County FFA members competed in the annual County Public Speaking Contest at the Berks County Intermediate Unit on Feb. 24. FFA members could enter conservation, general prepared, and the FFA creed contests.

Fourteen FFA members competed in the General Prepared Contest. Becky Sonnen, also a sophomore, placed first with her speech entitled "Mastitis-Money Down the Drain."

And, in the FFA Creed Contest Kirk Sattazahn, a freshman, placed first; Brenda McFarland, a freshman, placed third; and Karen Fessler, also a freshman, placed fifth.

The top three places in each division go on to Area Contest Competition, on April 16th.

PERFORMANCE THAT COUNTS:

Now you can select a Simmental bull that increases growth while improving calving ease.

Some said it was impossible. But again, the doubters were wrong.

519,000 Records Analyzed * by Cornell University showed:
• Birth weight-down • Weaning weight-up. • Yearling weight-up.

Simmental bulls can give you calving ease plus growth.

* Cornell University analyzed all of our performance records from 1970 through 1981. All 519,000 progeny of all 7,436 sires were included. Compared with 1970, sires used in 1981 showed marked improvements in expected progeny difference values for birth weight, weaning weight and yearling weight.

I even have approx. 1.8 mile of road frontage. Please help me - I am lonely - there is not much activitiy around here anymore since my owner lives here alone and can no longer use all of my precious assets.

Dan Cochran is involved in four, 4-H clubs and is reaching for more of what 4-H offers

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

TRAPPE — Most kids would be content to be active in one 4-H club, but not Dan Cochran. Currently he is involved in four clubs and continues to reach for more 4-H activities.

One could easily describe Dan as an ideal 4-Her because of his enthusiasm and excitement about everything the 4-H program offers.

Dan, 15, the son of Gary and Alice Cochran, started his 4-H story in 1981 when a variety of influences came together.

Dan was familier with pigs since his family had always raised a few pigs for meat. Yet, one year when he attended the Farm Show he found the pigs and pig show fascinating, and spent a great deal of time in that area.

He learned about the fun things a 4-H club offers from his mother, a former 4-Her, who also told him about the education she gained from her beef project.

Dan thought about the farm show, his mother's stories and the pigs out in the barn. Then he made the decision to give 4-H a try because he "thought it would be neat to start raising pigs."

He didn't wait for someone to come to him, once he decided, Dan contacted the Montgomery County Extension and found out when the next livestock club meeting was.

Dan holds a runt that he is raising. A neighbor farmer gave the pig to Dan so it would have a chance to survive.

At this point it was mid-year and too late to begin a project. Dan decided to attend the meetings to make sure he wanted to pursue this project without the commitment of purchasing pigs.

This year was important, Dan explained since he learned a lot about grooming and showing and what the club was all about. He also realized that he wanted to start a pig project.

In April 1982 he purchased two purebred Duroc pigs from a Duroc breeder in nearby Telford. Dan based his criteria for selecting this breed on what the judges were picking in the showring. At that time the Duroc breed was winning many market hog classes.

The second year he raised purebred Spots and showed them to the reserve champion position. Dan contends, however, that he likes the Duroc breed best, either purebred or crossed with Hampshires.

Finding the showring to be infectious, Dan entered his pigs in the Farm Show this past year. Although he didn't place very high, he greatly enjoyed it, and plans are already in place for a return engagement next year.

The Livestock club that Dan belongs to encourages its members to market or promote their project to prospective buyers. This can be accomplished by writing to individual buyers and letting them know when and where the 4-H project will be sold.

Dan's success in promoting his project is witnessed regularly in the prices he receives. His projects consistently bring more per pound since he has more buyers bidding.

Successes are partially responsible for keeping his interest in 4-H. Even more important are the friendships he has gained. These friends, many of whom he knows will be lifelong, kept encouraging him to try something new and spurred him on to new levels of achievement.

Enrollment in the sheep project was the result of his 4-H friends motivation. After some considerations he entered the sheep club last year. The purebred Hampshire project he chose took champion honors in the lightweight class.

These achievements have not gone unnoticed. Last year he won the Farm Credit awards for sheep and swine.

In addition to preparing a project, he is also the current president of the livestock club and the treasurer of the sheep club.

His interest in livestock doesn't stop with the show ring. The past two years he has been learning about type and confirmation by participating on the county livestock judging team that attended the State Achievement Days.

Dan is looking forward to a good judging team and developing his judging skills even further this year with the team's new coach, Steve Ledoux.

For his third club, Dan reached beyond livestock and found the exchange club. Dan discovered this club through his friends. "We have a great time there, all my friends are in it," he explained.

Last year the club made a trip to North Carolina and Virginia Beach. While down south, Dan had the unique opportunity to work on a pig and tobacco farm. He was actually able to help harvest the tobacco, an experience he describes as "really great."

Dan is equally excited about this year when the 4-Hers they visited make the trip up here. He is anxious to show them everything we have to offer.

The Toastmasters International Club is the fourth club Dan has

Toastmaster's Youth Program teaches 4-H'ers leadership, speaking skills

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Leadership is an elusive quality often referred to as the "stuff" of which successful 4-H'ers is made. It is difficult to define and more difficult still to explain how 4-H'ers build on this important characteristic to become leaders.

There is one small, dedicated group of 4-H'ers determined to enhance their leadership abilities, and each Saturday morning for eight weeks they leave the coziness of their beds to be a part of the Youth Leadership program being led by the Conestoga Toastmasters. Seventeen 4-H'ers are enrolled in the program, and program coordinator Jack Fish acknowledges that he is pleased with their attitude, calling it "very unusual."

According to Fish, the program "deals with leadership in general." He explained that the Toastmasters' philosophy is achieved through effective speaking, both impromptu and prepared.

He notes, however, that giving speeches is only one part of the course. "They also learn to run a meeting, and just as important, they learn how to be a participant in a meeting." He said this may be the only opportunity for some people to actually be taught the basics of participating in a meeting.

Fish said these 4-H'ers will learn not just to give speeches, but also how to react in all speaking situations. Fish said, "In Toastmasters we have housewives, executives, engineers and all walks of life represented. What they have in common is that they have not accomplished anything until they have communicated."

Fish himself has been a member of Toastmasters since 1958, when, he said, "I recognized the need to speak more effectively." A plant engineering manager at Sperry New Holland, Fish said that he enjoys his continuing association with Toastmasters because it keeps you "constantly in shape."

The current group of 4-H'ers in Youth Leadership ranges in age from 11 to 17, a factor which concerned Fish at first, but he admits that the group has been quite cohesive. "The fact that they are all 4-H'ers is very important, because they have something in common. We're all very impressed with these kids." One of the other adults working with the group noted his satisfaction in watching individual members of the group grow through the eight-week course.

Fish adds, "Most of us enjoy working with children — it is very interesting." He notes that 4-H is a natural organization for them to work with because of its leadership opportunities, but added that they are willing to work with any kind of group with an interest in leadership.

Throughout the program Fish notes that 4-H'ers receive "many, many speaking opportunities." Beyond that, they elect a president, vice-president and secretary at each meeting to give them a chance for that sort of decision making.

Each participant has been given a handbook, which has a complete Roberts Rules of Order, plus many suggested fundamentals for preparing and giving speeches, to be used in any situation. Fish noted that "Youth Leadership" is a copywrited program of Toastmasters International. Another important element of the program is teaching the 4-H'ers to be effective listeners, something else which Fish believes no one is teaching. "Listening is every bit as important as speaking," he says.

About the Saturday meetings, Fish says, "We try to create an atmosphere of helpfulness. We are not critics; we are evaluators. When we evaluate the emphasis is on helpfulness. We give them immediate feedback through evaluation."

Fish says, "Speaking is not a science — it is an art. We cannot change the person, but we can add to their strengths."

Zoann Parker, 4-H Agent in Lancaster County comments, "This is one of the best leadership programs I have seen. It helps them learn to run meetings and make decisions, and also teaches them the ability to think on their feet, which is one of the most valuable skills."

This course is the first offered by Conestoga Toastmasters, but last year Lancaster Toastmasters offered a similar course, and Zoann has had the opportunity to see results from that program. She said, "Those who took the course are much more confident and much more willing to take leadership positions within their clubs, and to work with younger members."

Toastmaster's Youth Leadership Program

Adding further praise to the Toastmasters, Zoann noted, "This is such a concentrated course, it will really last a lifetime. They are learning lifetime skills, and will be more willing to reach out to other goals with more confidence."

Conestoga Toastmasters currently offers an adult Speechcraft course, using the same fundamentals of effective communication.

Additionally, the public is invited to attend any of their regular meetings held the first and third Wednesdays at the Stauffer Mansion on the Lititz Pike, beginning at 7 p.m.

There is no doubt that when these 17 4-H'ers complete this eight-week Youth Leadership course they will be better able to participate in any kind of meeting. Furthermore, their effective communication skills will be helpful to them throughout their lives.

joined. He describes this club in the same glowing terms as his other clubs, "It's great, we really have a ball, all my friends are in it."

This is a limited club which runs eight weeks. The members are taught the importance of parliamentary procedure and tips on public speaking from experts.

When he isn't busy with one of his clubs, Dan can usually be found preparing for some other 4-H activity. This year he will be attending the Pennsylvania Farm Cooperatives Institute and Capital Days.

Dan is involved in so many activities, his mother has had to develop a filing system to keep things coordinated.

Currently he is getting ready to purchase his pig project for 1986. He is also busy coordinating his various clubs for the upcoming Montgomery County 4-H showcase on April 5, 1986. This showcase, Dan noted, is designed to share the county's 4-H story with the community and hopefully recruit new members.

One would think all of Dan's time is filled with 4-H activities. Yet, he is also active in the teen program at his church and plays in the Perkiomen Valley High School Band.

When talking with with Dan, it isn't long before his excitement about involvement with 4-H comes out. His eyes light up when discussing an event he attended or describes what he likes to see in a pig. He could talk for hours on the many things he has done and seen.

He credits the success and fun of his 4-H experience to the many friends he's made, his parents and county agent, Nancy Kadwill, whom he describes as a "dynamic person."

Dan someday hopes to go to college for agriculture and then maybe become a county agent.

Now, however, he is enjoying the challenge and diversity of 4-H and plans to continue having fun and reaching for more of what 4-H offers.

For the avid gardener

On nice days now, many home gardeners will be heading outdoors to tidy up their yards and prepare for the new growing season. Pruning is one of the first chores they're likely to tackle.

Plants need pruning for three main reasons: to control growth, improve health and increase production. But for best results, be sure to prune yours at the proper time, advises University of Delaware extension horticulturist Sue Barton.

Before trimming any flowering trees and shrubs this spring, she suggests home gardeners consider when these plants bloom and the growth on which they flower. Spring flowering ornamentals, such as lilac and forsythia, which bloom on last year's wood should not be pruned now, as this will remove the stems that produce flowers.

Summer flowering ornamentals like beauty bush and crepe myrtle, on the other hand, may be safely pruned in late winter or early spring, since they bloom on shoots from the current season. Pruning them now will encourage new growth, providing more shoots and flower buds.

Barton offers the following guidelines to help you decide when to prune.

Late Winter into Early Spring:

- Remove old canes from mature shrubs, except those that flower early;
- Trim deciduous hedges;
- Prune dormant fruit trees:
- Prune inconvenient low branches and crossing branches from flowering ornamental trees;
- Do not prune shade trees and evergreens now.

Late Spring into Early Summer:

- Remove old canes on mature shrubs after they bloom,
- Trim evergreens with new growth;
- Pinch back new growth on flowering shrubs to encourage branching;
- Remove dead flowers of azaleas and rhododendrons.

Throughout Summer:

- Shear hedges;
- Remove lower branches from young shade trees;
- Prune evergreen shrubs;
- Pinch back growing tips to maintain plant size.

Late Fall into Winter:

- Ease off evergreen pruning;
- Prune shade trees.

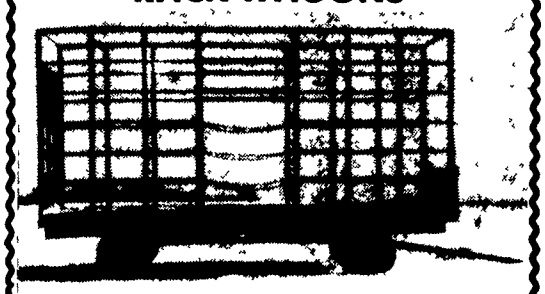
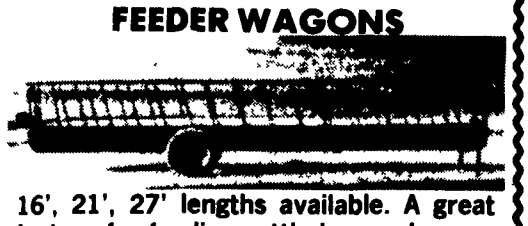
RACK WAGONS



18'x8' beds, 20' also available. Beds are made of oak wood; racks are made of 2" square tubing; door in back will swing both ways; two 4' side openings. Will build on your gear or sell you a gear and bed. Call for more information.

FEEDER WAGONS



16', 21', 27' lengths available. A great feature for feeding cattle in meadows or in feed lots. Can be used for feeding round bales.

If old gas tanks are used for feeder wagon bottoms, they should be sand blasted. If not, the gas and rust may result in sick cattle or even death. Be safe and buy from us as ours are sand blasted before being painted.

No need to rely on others to pick your rocks — just hook up your Front End Rock Picker anytime and do the work of 8-10 men

When you are finished just pull the pins or release your QUICK-TACH and set the rock picking assembly aside until you need it again

Picture below shows raking rocks in a river bed — this is a more difficult operation than average as rocks are under rocks.

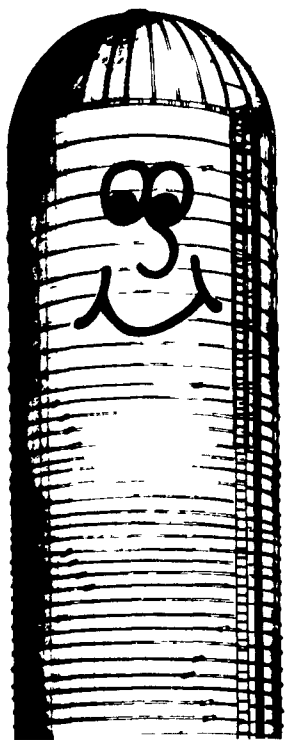
YOUR TIRED OLD SILO CAN BE YOUR VERY BEST FRIEND.



LET MADISON SHOW YOU HOW.

We have a fully trained, professional Madison Silo crew ready to restore your old silos — regardless of brand — back to a profitable condition on your farm.

We rebuild silos — including correcting lean where necessary.

We refinish silos and barn walls with the proven Gunite process.

Madison Silos prepares your silo by sandblasting all areas to be Gunited.

Sandblasting is the only way to get a dirt-free, clean area that will insure a proper bond with new cement to your old silo.

Madison Silos will then apply ½" of Gunite that will bond and become part of the old staves.

Remember...Madison Silos is the only company that sandblasts!

Ask about the best silo repair warranty in the business. You will be pleasantly surprised.

Madison's proven Gunite process helps your silo perform like new again.

The clear strength advantage of the new Calumet S-3750 spreader tank

You see it first in the "over-built" undercarriage.

We wanted an exceptionally strong 3 750 gallon liquid spreader tank. We got it by using the under carriage from our big 4 500 gallon spreader. We also used the bigger model s 18 x 22.5 16 ply tires on 4 inch spindles and 16 000 lb capacity hub. And like all Calumet tanks the new S 3750 features extra strength flanged heads and continuous finished welding of tank to frame (instead of skip welds).

The S 3750 operates from 540 or 1000 RPM PTO or optional hydraulic motor drive. It accepts our 2 or 4 shank soil injectors. Four wheel hydraulic brakes are controlled from the tractor cab. Liquid level indicator is standard.

And the price is right.

If you re thinking about a new tank, see the new competitively priced S 3750 at your Calumet distributor. Other models offer 2250 3250 4500 and 6500 gallon capacities. All are built strong as a Calumet by the strong company in liquid manure equipment.

We Wanted To Show You The Problem Weeds That Dual Controls. But They Never Came Up.

The best way to keep problems from coming up in your fields is to put Dual® herbicide down. It keeps some of the toughest weeds and grasses from ever seeing the light of day.

Problem weeds are no problem for Dual.

Dual is concentrated to work harder and last longer. It's a different, more active chemical that needs very little rain to activate. And once it gets into the soil, it stays close to the surface where it stops problem grasses and weeds during germination. So your crop will have less competition for water and nutrients during the important early growth stage.

And Dual breaks down more slowly, so it lasts two to four weeks longer and keeps late season grasses from interfering with harvest.

Dual does more. You use less.

Because Dual is concentrated, you can use it at low pint rates, not quarts like other herbicides. It's also versatile enough to be used on corn and soybeans, in conventional or conservation tillage practices, or to be incorporated or applied over-the-top at the same low rate. And it does it all with safety to your crop and no carryover.

These times demand low cost per acre.

When you consider Dual's low pint rates and low per acre cost you'll find no herbicide offers you more performance and versatility for the money than Dual. And that's important. Because when you're fighting a battle against problem weeds, you need all the control you can get. Dual from Ciba-Geigy.

LONGER LASTING DUAL® Made Like No Other Herbicide To Perform Like No Other Herbicide.

Wool Preparation and Marketing

The National Wool Growers Association released to the public in January a 45-page publication prepared by Travis Jones under a U.S. Department of Commerce grant with the intention of providing information to wool growers to assist them in marketing their wool. The publication and distribution of the booklet is a joint project of the NWGA and the SID. Copies can be obtained from the NWGA for a nominal fee. Write National Wool Grower Assn., 8 East Broadway, Suite 415, Salt Lake City, UT 84111.

Mr. Jones and his review committee have produced a booklet that will answer most of the questions that either a western range or farm flock wool producer might have about how to improve his wool clip and thereby receive a premium price for it. The publication of this reference is especially timely considering the economic climate.

The contents of the booklet are all inclusive. Starting with an explanation of wool terms and grades, it moves on to objective measurement of wool, genetic uniformity of the wool clip, mill manufacturing requirements, wool clip contamination, and shearing and preparation of the fleeces. There is an excellent bibliography if the reader needs further references and examples of documented improvement of a wool clip over a four year period.

The emphasis in Wool Preparation and Marketing on micron measurement of wool and object measurement of a clip by a laboratory is an excellent push in the right direction for producers, since as Mr. Jones says, "It narrows the risk for the buyer." With lower risk levels a buyer can afford a higher price.

The section on the heritability of wool traits is very good. The emphasis on "tested" rams with an explanation of how to take side and britch samples and test them may show some producers a better way to select their rams.

When we read about the difficulty mills have in disposing of waste water from the scouring process, we can better understand the emphasis on a clean wool clip, one that is free of wool tags, paint, plastic fibers, vegetable matter, and dirt. There are diagrams of good shearing facilities for both ranch and farm, advice on how to build a skirting table and how a fleece should be skirted. (Skirting is necessary if the producer wants the best product possible.)

For the beginning wool producer this publication can be considered a well written textbook that will certainly answer almost every question he might have. For the long-time wool producer it will serve as a review course that will remind him of all those things that he should have done to improve his clip. Hopefully, for both, it will point the way to the production of a "reputation clip" and a brighter future for the entire American wool production industry.

From ham to heart valves, pigs serve mankind

NEWARK, Del. – Pigs often take a bum rap. "Sloppy as a pig" and "fat as a hog" are just two of the common expressions that slander this farm animal.

"Actually pigs are very clean and intelligent creatures," says Richard Barczewski, University of Delaware acting extension livestock specialist. In fact, they're the most intelligent of the domestic animals."

Pigs were domesticated around 4900 B.C. by the Chinese, and in 1539 Hernando Cortez brought the first pigs to Florida. Some historians assert that Christopher Columbus left eight pigs on Haiti at an even earlier date. These animals went wild, reproduced and were used as provisions for future expeditions. Some escaped to other islands of the West Indies and account for the wild populations still found there.

"Several feral (domestic turned wild) hog populations can be found in the U.S. today, along with some European wild boars that were released for hunting purposes," says Barczewski. "But these pigs are not to be reckoned with. They're razor-tusked, lean, rangy animals with unfriendly dispositions–especially if you happen on a sow with young."

Intelligent animals

Pigs are not stupid. During the 18th century, sows learned to point birds by watching dogs do it. And unlike cows and horses which eat themselves to death if allowed unlimited feed, pigs limit their food intake.

Barczewski says pigs have distinct food preferences and if offered a variety will eat only what appeals to them. Pigs are even used in France to find truffles, mushroom-like fungi that grow undergound.

It's been said that everything except a pig's squeal is marketable. Materials for paint brushes, gelatin and gloves all come from pigs. Glandular secretions and chemical compounds from pigs are useful in treating human diseases. Pigs also provide many essential medical supplies including heart valves, insulin and pepsin. Pigskin is used as a skin covering for burn patients because it breathes while protecting sensitive burned areas.

"Contrary to popular belief, pigs are not dirty animals," says Barczewski. "In fact, they're among the cleanest. For example, a pig typically selects just one place in which to dung. I wish all the dogs I've tried to housebreak had had this tendency!"

Barczewski says pigs wallow in mud as a defense against heat. They have very few sweat glands and thus lack a natural cooling system. Their only recourse is to immerse themselves in something wet. And how often can a pig find clean water in which to wallow?

Adult domestic swine generally weigh up to 800 pounds and live 15 to 20 years. The largest pig on record was a 1,904 pound monster from North Carolina. But most breeding animals weigh between 300 and 500 pounds.

Similar to humans

One distinct breed of pig is raised for its small size. These "mini pigs" weigh approximately 225 pounds at maturity and were developed because of the need for a research animal of similar size to humans, says Barczewski. Pigs are valuable in research because their skin, blood and digestive systems are similar to those of humans. The mini pig is used to study the effects of diet on cardiovascular disease, alcoholism and many other diseases. Pigs are so important in research that a symposium was held recently on the use of swine in biomedical studies. At the symposium, scientists presented 225 reports on various aspects of this type of research.

Pigs are important to mankind in many ways, but their most obvious value for consumers is as food. Today's pigs are bred 50 percent leaner than those in 1950. A three-ounce serving of cooked lean pork provides 198 calories, contains only 77 milligrams of cholesterol, and is low in sodium. But it provides 44 percent of the daily protein requirement and is a good source for most B vitamins as well as iron and zinc. In addition, only 40 percent of the fat in pork is saturated.

"The average American is poorly informed about pigs and pork products," Barczewski says "But many people benefit from the good nutrition in pork, and also from the products obtained from pigs."

By nature intelligent and clean animals, pigs provide mankind with many important commodities other than red meat.

Performance Tested Bull Sale slated

HARRISBURG – The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center will conduct the 13th annual Performance Tested Bull Sale on Friday, March 28 beginning at noon.

The sale is to be held in the new Ag Arena, which is directly adjacent to the Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road in State College.

Bulls on tests include 30 Angus, seven Charolais, one Chianina, 27 Polled Herefords, 14 Simmentals and one red Angus. Through the 112 days on test, the average daily gain posted by the 80 animals was 3.46 pounds per day and the average lifetime weight per day of age was 3.21 pounds.

For additional information, contact Glenn Eberly at (814) 238-2527 or write to the Meat Animal Evaluation Center.

Lancaster Sheep Club to meet

LANCASTER – Youths interested in feeding market lambs or raising breeding sheep are invited to attend the reorganizational meeting of the Lancaster County 4-H Woolies Club at 7:30 p.m. on March 17 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

Election of officers will highlight the meeting activities and members will receive project books.

To be eligible for membership in the club, members must be between the ages of 8 and 18. They have the responsibility of caring for and feeding their own sheep and keeping records on their lambs. They also have the opportunity of showing their lambs, and eventually selling them at one of the 4-H auctions.

For more information about the 4-H Club program, contact the Penn State Extension Service.

Reduced soil compaction means higher yields

HARRISBURG – Trashy fields of crop residue are not forgotten or idle fields, they are busy...visibly, controlling soil erosion and conserving moisture. Not so visible are the improvements in soil tilth because of the crop residue present.

Good tilth indicates that soils are loose, easily crumbled, and make a good seedbed. This allows ease of root growth, provides easy movement of soil moisture and better use of fertilizer. The end result is improved yields.

Soils are a living and breathing environment for plants and soil organisms. When soil is too densely packed, there is little space for crop roots, air, water, and soil organisms. Soil tilth is improved by the addition of the organic matter and by making less trips with equipment which reduces compaction.

Because we farm the soil, compaction will always be a problem. The degree that the problem affects crops depends on how much compaction has occurred. The more trips over the field, the greater the compaction. Compaction layers are caused by heavy equipment on medium and coarse textured soils.

Every time a tractor tire or a tire of a heavy implement rolls over the soil surface, it compresses the soil and crushes the soil particles together into a tighter mass. To eliminate or reduce this compaction, reduce the number of trips across the field with conservation tillage and use as light weight equipment as possible.

Compacted soil has a great deal of difficulty absorbing moisture, and water runs off carrying valuable topsoil and nutrient with it. Compaction also prevents good root development. Because the roots can't penetrate the compacted layer, they tend to spread along the surface and are cut off from subsoil moisture and plant nutrients.

Soil compaction has been known to reduce corn plant potassium uptake by 70 percent, nitrogen by 30 percent, magnesium by 20 percent, and calcium by 10 percent.

Good tilth increases the moisture absorption ability of the soil and creates a better environment for healthier root growth. This also controls erosion by reducing runoff and increases the soil's ability to grow better crops.

To help get started with conservation tillage and improving your soil tilth, contact the district conservationist at the local office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

Raising animals on limited acreage is subject of SE Livestock Day

DOYLESTOWN — Small farmers are big business. To address this need the annual Southeast Pennsylvania Livestock Day focused on the topic, Raising Farm Animals on Limited Acreage.

This well attended conference introduced various species which are popular on limited acreage, and then provided more details on these animals.

Michael Fournier, Extension Agent, Bucks County told the group that in this area making money was difficult due to the high land values. He pointed out that with certain species, using proper management and developing a local market, profit was a feasible goal.

Horses, the largest area of interest, have great economic importance, according to Fournier. They are the number one spectator sport in the U.S. and provide the second highest sales area for many dealers of feed and equipment.

He went on to point out that while profit potential is big for Standardbreds, it is not feasible to consider as a limited acreage investment with the goal of making a profit.

Anyone interested in beef has two options, cow and calf or steers. Profit potential for both are slim unless a local, specialized market can be developed. He also noted the need to raise more than one or two animals to be profitable.

Hogs also have two avenues which can be taken, farrowing or market. Fournier informed the group that the farrowing operation offered no profit potential on a limited basis. This is due to the intense management and important daily schedule required. He went on to advise the group against entering this venture.

The alternate choice, market hogs, are a potential money making operation Fournier informed the audience. Providing, he continued, a local market can be developed. He explained how many individuals have been successful in developing a local market for their hogs.

Another species, sheep, also has a large possible profit potential. Fournier pointed out that presently the market for sheep meat is limited. He feels there exists an opportunity for expansion of this market. However, success would need to begin on a local level.

The poultry industry, either layers or broilers, has a good possible profit potential since neither require a large amount of space. The layer operation, however does require a more intense management level.

The rabbit industry has experienced a large amount of growth in recent years. Rabbits can be sold as either pets or lab animals for a possible profit. The drawback to selling lab animals is the need to have controlled environments and intense management to meet the lab requirements.

Both goats and dairy cows were advised against raising on limited acreage. Intense management and a tight daily schedule are needed. Also to sell any product, strict government sanitation rules must be met.

Veal calves were also advised against since a good barn and intense management are musts. However, Fournier did allow that with very good management, profit is possible.

Fournier concluded that market hogs were the only species with a fairly good profit potential. Sheep and poultry came in a close second.

Also included on the day's program was a presentation by John Trainer and Thomas Sumter on tax considerations. The reason for operating the farm, for profit or not for profit, determines the tax category the operation falls into.

If a farm is operated for profit, losses can be offset by other activities. If it is not being operated for profit, there are a limited amount of deductions which can be declared.

There are essentially nine business motives which determine which category a farm is.

The afternoon sessions went into greater details on each species providing marketing and management tips.

Keeping clean water clean

YORK — Little things mean a lot when it comes to protecting or improving water quality in local streams near livestock farms in the Chesapeake Bay region, says Lee B. Bentz, of the Soil Conservation Service in York.

With so much information out now promoting manure storage facilities, farmers tend to think of manure storage in terms of answer to solving agricultural manure run-off problems in the Chesapeake Bay Watershed. While manure storage is functional and convenient, it is also expensive. And in today's tight agricultural economy, not every livestock operation can afford storage facilities, and indeed, may not even need them.

Bentz points out, "Uncontrolled or poorly controlled surface water runoff around buildings causes most of the water pollution problems associated with livestock operations. Clean water in the form of rain from roofs, fields and roads runs through the barnyard, becomes polluted when manure and urine and ends up in the creek. Overflow from water troughs or springs also contributes to the problem."

Correcting these problems is relatively simple and inexpensive if carried out and maintained in a thoughtful manner, he says.

First, try to keep clean water clean. Divert all surface water from fields and roads around the barnyard to a safe outlet. Install roof spouting or drip edge subsurface drains to carry roof water away from the barnyard area by gravity flow. Provide floats to control water level in water troughs and keep them in good repair. If a trough is spring fed, provide an underground outlet (tile) to the creek or drainage ditch to catch the overflow.

Next, use sod filter strips between the barnyard and the creek to settle out pollutants; the wider, the better! It's best to allow run-off waters to dissipate over as wide an area as practical rather than concentrate the flow in one area. Traffic patterns of both animals and machines may have to be rerouted to allow this system to work effectively. Grazing and fencing patterns may have to be altered, too. Limit the number of animals and the length of time grazing is permitted to promote a heavy sod for good filtration.

Further information or assistance is available from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, 122 Pleasant Acres Road, York, 17402, or phone 755-2966.

Feeder pigs: uniform lots mean higher profits

By
Richard Barczewski
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. – Selling feeder pigs can be frustrating, especially to people new to the hog business, or those unloading a few pigs their own operation can't handle. As a grader at a local feeder pig sale, I though that now might be a good time to review what graders and buyers look for in a feeder pig.

Graded feeder pigs need to be identified (by ear tag) prior to delivery to the sale site. Upon arrival, pigs are grouped according to weight and graded. Grades are based on muscling and general health of the feeder pig. Most pigs fall into the U.S. 1 or 2 grades; however, piglets showing little muscling and a lot of fat cover may be graded U.S. 3 or 4. The last two grades–U.S. utility and U.S. cull–are reserved for extremely thin, narrow piglets with a minimal amount of muscling. Difference between these two grades are in health.

Graders are also responsible for removing any undesirable piglets with defects that make them a poor investment or risk to other herd animals. These defects include hernias, atrophic rhinitis, abscesses, intact (uncastrated) males, severe parasite infestations, lameness and any other potential swine health problem.

The ultimate goal is to provide buyers with pigs that have the potential to develop a desirable carcass. Any defect that would hinder this goal could result in the pig being ungraded. If you're at a graded feeder pig sale and see one or more of your pigs ungraded, ask why. What you learn can be useful in correcting the situation. If atrophic rhinitis is the problem, vaccinating may be helpful. External parasites can be controlled by spraying with an approved insecticide, while hernias may require some genetic changes since they can be inherited. Don't be afraid to ask, since they're your pigs.

Why do we have graded pig sales? The answer is simple. Graded pigs are more valuable to buyers than straight run pigs. Ideally, the feeder pig buyer likes to buy pigs in groups that will finish together at the same weight, in order to sell them for a premium price as fat hogs. Buying a large group of feeder pigs at a similar weight and grade increases the chance of producing a uniform lot of finished hogs.

Packers like to see uniform lots of hogs, since a uniform product is more valuable to them. It's amazing how often loads of pigs are brought to market with wide weight ranges. I've sometimes seen small groups at a graded scale–10 to 15 animals–that ranged in weight from 20 to 80 pounds.

I realize some small producers aren't able to produce uniform lots, but if you plan to sell at a graded sale, uniformity is to your advantage. Otherwise you'll be stuck with small lots of animals (one to four per lot) that bring lower prices because the buyer will have to mix several lots to fill a pen on his finishing floor. Mixing is less desirable because it results in greater stress and reduced piglet performance on the finishing floor.

Under ideal grading systems, a U.S. 1 feeder pigs will grow into a U.S. 1 market hog. The same trend follows for the other grades. Since there's a fine line between a low U.S. 1 and a high U.S. 2, graders usually group piglets as U.S. 1-2 or U.S. 2-3, and so on. Pigs from the same farm are usually similar in their conformation and will fall into one of the above grades, provided the genetic makeup of the herd is similar.

How do you produce uniform lots of feeder pigs? This is a difficult question with no easy answer. The best way is to start with a uniform sow herd. It's also important to breed your animals in groups. This will result in large numbers of similarly aged piglets which, if the sow herd is uniform, will be alike in size and conformation. Such piglets can be managed as a group.

For example, they can be treated for external parasites, vaccinated for atrophic rhinitis and castrated under a normal schedule. When sows don't farrow in groups, it's harder to schedule routine management practices. In addition, group farrowing allows for all-in/all-out management, with proper disinfecting between farrowing groups. This helps reduce piglet losses and disease which can also affect piglet uniformity at weaning.

Raising feeder pigs is a high management enterprise that requires a lot of time and effort on the part of the manager for optimum production. To enhance marketability, try to produce uniform groups of feeder pigs. Graded feeder pig sales offer an opportunity to realize higher market values for your pigs. However, to optimize profits, you must be able to offer larger (15 and up) groups of uniform piglets.

Chester Co. Crops Day scheduled

WEST CHESTER – Chester County Crops Day will be held on Tuesday March 18, 1986 at the East Brandywine Fire Hall in Guthriesville beginning at 9:15 a.m. The discussion will focus on two important crops to Southeast farmers–alfalfa and corn. Topics to be covered include how to pick top corn varieties, corn insect control, corn cost of production control, alfalfa insect control, and the effect of weeds on alfalfa yield and quality.

Farmers attending the day's activities will be able to recertify their private pesticide license, visit the exhibitors displaying crop production supplies, and visit the mobile manure and soil testing van. Also, the Chester County Soil Conservation District will award its annual "District Cooperator of the Year" Award.

Featured speakers include Dr. Sidney Bosworth, and Dr. Joseph McGahon, both Extension agronomy specialists, and Dr. Dennis Calvin, Extension specialist in entomology.

East Brandywine Fire Hall is located in Guthriesville along Rt. 322 in Chester County. Hamilton Bank is a co-sponsor of the day's activities. Please make reservations for lunch by contacting the Chester County Extension Service at 696-3500.

Farm Credit elects Beesley

DENVER, COLO — H. Brent Beesley has been appointed president and chief executive officer of the Farm Credit Corporation of America. The announcement was made by Grant T. Lucas, chairman of the FCCA board, following a special board meeting held February 13. Mr. Beesley's appointment is effective immediately.

"The appointment of Mr. Beesley as president and CEO of the FCCA is the culmination of a nationwide search that began almost eight months ago," Lucas said. "His training and experience in banking, government, law, economics and agriculture make him uniquely qualified for this critical position in the Farm Credit System.

"As the organization responsible for national leadership of the Farm Credit System, the FCCA will play a major role in effectively managing the system through these stressful times in the agriculture industry," Lucas said.

Beesley, age 40, holds a B.A. degree in economics and international relations from Bringham Young University, a Juris Doctoris from the Harvard Law School and an M.B.A. from the Harvard Business School. He served as director of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC), Washington, D.C., during the turbulent period of 1981-83. Prior to joining the FSLIC, Beesley was a partner in the Salt Lake City law firm of Ray, Quinney and Nebeker where he specialized in the representation of banks and bank holding companies.

Beesley currently is chairman of First Charter Savings Bank, St. George, Utah. He is a Utah native and owns a pure-bred cattle operation in the state.

"I appreciate the action taken by the board of directors and the confidence expressed in me," Beesley said. "I look forward to this challenging assignment. One of our first priorities is to understand the opportunities and vulnerabilities of the Farm Credit System in the present economic environment and in a range of future scenarios.

"We intend to build on the historical strengths of the Farm Credit System while carefully managing the system's exposure to risk," Beesley said. "Our primary goal is to serve the financial needs of American farmers and their cooperatives, now and in the years to come."

Beesley will succeed Alton B. Cook, who has served as interim president of the FCCA since its inception and chartering in July 1985. "Mr. Cook has been instrumental in establishing the FCCA," Lucas said. "He has recruited and organized an excellent professional staff and has provided critical leadership during the first eight months of the FCCA's existence."

Farm Credit loans okayed to rural electric co-ops

BALTIMORE— An amendment to the recently approved 1985 Farm Bill will expand the lending options available to the Banks for Cooperatives (BC) in the financing or rural electric and telephone cooperatives.

The legislation permits the BC to extend credit to cooperatives, other entities and their subsidiaries that have.

- received a loan, loan commitment, or loan guarantee from the Rural Electrification Administration (REA),
- received a loan or commitment from the Rural Telephone Bank,
- been certified by the REA Administrator to be eligible for a loan, loan commitment or loan guarantee.

Prior to this amendment, rural electric cooperatives were eligible to borrow from the BC only if 60% of their voting membership was held by farmers.

"This recent legislation demonstrates the increased level of Congressional support for the Farm Credit System. We are pleased with this new program," said Gene Swackhamer, President of the Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore. He added that, "This new legislation will provide another avenue of financing for rural electric and telephone cooperatives that were previously ineligible to borrow from the BC."

Van Dale develops conveyor-feeder

LONG LAKE, MN — A high capacity 16-inch-belt conveyor-feeder that operates on greatly-reduced friction in lengths of 210 feet has been introduced by Van Dale.

The belt on the Model 330 Convey-Or-Feeder® takes on a concave shape when moving feed. This "saucer-type" design allows more capacity, less feed loss and reduced buildup in sub-freezing weather.

On the 16-inch feeder, a simple reduction drive system utilizes one motor to drive both the feed-carrying belt and the plow. Single-split- and multi-lot plows are available. Other options include a decline section, hoppers, windboards and snap-on covers.

Stauffer develops dairy buffering agent

WESTPORT, CT — BUpHERD*, a new sodium sesquicarbonate buffering agent, is now being produced expressly for the dairy industry by Stauffer Chemical Company. The product's physical characteristics and its composition, a chemical combination of sodium carbonate and sodium bicarbonate, make it beneficial to use in feed blends and as top dressing by dairymen.

Developed by Stauffer to meet industry needs, BUpHERD is granular and free flowing, making it easier to handle both in mixing plants and on the farm. The product's uniform particle size and natural color also make it ideal for manufacturing consistent, homogeneous dairy rations.

Published research on the use of buffering agents in dairy cow feed has demonstrated their effectiveness in improving dry matter intake, increasing butterfat test and/or milk production. More recent research has shown sodium sesquicarbonate is both a buffering and a neutralizing agent that can produce equal or greater benefits than sodium bicarbonate and more economically.

Manufactured at Stauffer's Green River, Wyoming, facility, BUpHERD is available in 50-pound bags, 2000 pound semi-bulk bags and in bulk. Stauffer Chemical Company is a wholly owned subsidiary of Chesebrough-Pond's Inc.

Disappearance of bulls

A catalog of changes that have taken place on America's farms over the past 50 years would have to include such notable progress as the adoption of hybrid corn, the disappearance of draft horses, the introduction of the combine and self-tieing baler, and a trend toward bigness.

Scientists point proudly to their work with fertilizers and pesticides, and the inventors and manufacturers beam over the mechanization and automation they have brought to agriculture.

But if an agricultural Rip Van Winkle awoke after a 40-year snooze and looked around todays' family farm, he'd understand most of what he would see. Tractors would be bigger and better, crops would be more productive.

He might not fully understand a pipeline milker and he would miss the milk cans. But he wouldn't be all that baffled — until he was confronted with the problem of how cows have calves when there's no bull around.

Think about it. Fifty years ago, even 40 years ago, every farmer with a few head of dairy or beef animals kept a bull. of if he didn't keep enough animals to justify the expense of a bull, he relied on a neighbor who did keep one. But the bulls are gone from most farms today, replaced by the advances of science.

The fiercest, largest old bull I ever saw belonged to one of my boyhood neighbors — a dairy farmer by the rather unusual name of Ray Finkbinder. He operated a Grade A dairy, which meant he produced and bottled milk right there on the farm and delivered it door-to-door in the nearby city. Milk was unpasteurized in those days and all that was added was what accidentally made its way into the milk and through the strainer.

Ray had a fine herd of Guernsey cows so of course he kept an outstanding Guernsey bull. Maybe it was my age and size at the time that made that old bull seem so large and so mean — and maybe it was the large brass ring old Homer always wore in his nose. Or perhaps it was the electric fence strung around his small compound.

Each day on our walk to the one-room school, my brothers and I had to pass that bull pen — right next to the road, and sometimes Homer would be right there next to the fence snorting and pawing and acting very bullish. At first it was all we could do to keep from running past the pen when he was acting up. But then as time passed we grew used to the old fellow and we started to trust him and the electric fence that kept us apart.

Homer stayed in that pen year-round with nothing but an overhanging tree for shade in the summer and a shelter made of baled straw in the winter. For years he lived what seemed to be a useful and happy life, never venturing outside that two-acre lot.

On occasion he would have cow visitors and each morning and evening as we trudged past we would stop to say hello or to test our bravery by venturing under the electric fence and into the pen.

It was a game of chicken — or maybe more appropriately, bull — where we would sneak into the pen far away from the bull and see how close we could get to him before the fear of being trampled or gored caused us to run for the safety of the electric fence. We had a lot of faith in that fence, it never occurred to us what might happen if in a fit of thrift old Finkbinder decided not to spring for the electricity needed to keep that fence hot.

Like so many good bulls of that time Homer went off to become hamburger and was replaced by artificial breeding. That technology breakthrough gave dairy farmers everywhere access to the finest bulls in the country and did more to improve milk output than anything before or since. It also freed up some land and eliminated the hazards associated with keeping a bull.

Today huge breeding organizations keep the few outstanding bulls needed to breed most of the nation's dairy cows. Through science and a vast organization of technicians, the average dairyman is only a phone call away from the services of bulls that have proven their ability to sire top milk producers.

For a fee, a dairyman can introduce top bloodlines and steadily improve the genetic quality of his herd. Unlike the racehorse business, the dairyman spends only a few dollars for the services of a sire that might have cost many thousands — a sire that might have proven himself by producing hundreds of high-producing milking cows.

The trend toward artificial breeding has been so complete that many of today's dairymen have never owned a mature bull and most city people don't even know what one looks like.

That's sort of strange when you consider that about half of the dairy calves born each year are bulls.

Seedway adds seed protectant

OVERLAND PARKS, KS — KALO INC. announced "GERMATE" Planter Box Seed Protectant will be marketed by the Seedway, Inc., York, PA division.

GERMATE improves emergence and stand uniformity under rotational, minimum, and no-till farming conditions. In addition, it is especially useful under conventional tillage situations where extra organic material has been left on the land for erosion control.

All of these conditions encourage seed disease organisms, wireworms, and seed corn maggots to proliferate. Even under continuous conventional cropping, seedling diseases and soil-borne insects constantly threated the crop. These pests rob farmers of valuable yield every season.

GERMATE is the only fungicide-insecticide seed protectant that contains Vitavax® Systemic Fungicide, Maneb Contact Fungicide, and Lindane Insecticide. Vitavax penetrates the seed coat translocating into the roots and plant to provide long lasting disease protection through the seedling stage. Maneb protects from seed-borne, pre- and post-emergence seedling diseases caused by Fusarium SPP., Pythium SPP., Rhizoctonia SPP., and Helminthosporium SPP. Germate also contains Lindane for protection against seed corn maggots and wireworms.

The product is easily applied by pouring the pre-measured packet on the seed. Stir and plant. Each packet treads one bag of seed corn. Germate contains graphite to ensure seed flow through the planter. Cost is approximately 75 cents an acre depending on seeding rate.

For more information contact Seedway at 717-764-9814.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Repair machinery now

Spring is around the corner. It may not seem like it when we see snow on the ground or hear forecasts of snow, but it is closer than it was in December.

What does that mean? It means that before you know it we'll be in the full swing of an always hectic planting season.

Are you ready? Do you have your fertilizer ordered? Are seeds in the shed? What about lime and pesticides?

I can hear all of you saying "sure we have our fertilizer all ordered and even paid for. The fertilizer dealer said it was going up in price - besides, we needed the tax deduction. Seeds are also not only ordered, but safely tucked away along with our pesticides. Lime was all applied last fall so we're all set."

That's good but what about your machinery? You know, those inanimate objects that don't complain or make any noise most of the time?

Is it ready to go? When did you last grease it? What about replacing parts, nuts, bolts, screws, shear pins, etc? What about changing that tired oil that has been working in your tractor all winter? What about the temporary patchup you did on the hydraulic hose?

It's Time

It's time to be replenishing your supply of nuts and bolts and all those other little goodies that pop off machines when they are in heavy use. They don't weigh very much and are hard to find when lost, but the effect the loss of one has on your operation can be costly.

Now would be a good time to replace that worn belt, beat-up drive chain, or temporary fastener with a new one. How many acres of corn could you plant in the two hours it takes to go to your dealers to get a replacement item because one broke?

It would also be a good time to change the oil, lubricate moving parts, change the air filter, check the fuel filter, fill up the hydraulic system, and pump up the tires.

Checklist

Make a check list of jobs to be done before next week rolls around. Then make another one of jobs to be done before planting or hay harvesting time.

1. Replace that worn out plowshare.
2. Put shear pins in where they belong, not that bent nail you finished up the job with last year.
3. Check out your drill - did you remember to clean out the fertilizer last year? What about the old seeds, birds' nests, mouse homes, etc.?
4. Grease everything that needs greased (grease is cheap compared to the down time that excess wear may cause plus that screech of dry metal against dry metal is irritating.)
5. Tighten bolts and screws where they are loose.
6. Replace worn or broken knives and teeth.

Hurry

There is no more lag time left. Spring will soon be here. The sun comes up earlier every day. Birds are busy establishing territory. Cats are howling. Don't get caught with a week or two weeks worth of machine repair work to do before you can get to work. Do it now.

Manure: a valuable resource

POTTSVILLE – "Livestock and poultry operations have a mixed blessing in the manure produced," says John Metrick with the Soil Conservation Service. For years animal waste has been considered a necessary evil of raising animals. Now with the need to lower operating costs and concern over improving water quality, farmers are looking at manure in a different light. John said, "this is an excellent time to develop a wastes management system."

The first step is to properly store the manure. The benefits of storing it are many. Recent research has shown that wear and tear are less when the equipment is used in concentrated periods versus continual use Fuel and time savings will occur when spreading is done a few times instead of daily. Soil compaction occurs when spreading in wet fields. The compaction will affect the plants yields for years.

Finally, higher fertilizer value is obtained from the manure when spread just prior to planting. "In daily spreading," said Metrick, "more of the nitrogen is lost through volatilization. Also phosphorous and potassium are more likely to be lost through soil erosion."

The type of storage and size of the facility will depend upon the number of animals, type of manure, site conditions, and the farmer's personal preferences. According to John, SCS will help with the design and sizing of the facility "Our biggest concerns are that the facility is structurally sound, it is what the farmer wants and needs, and that he gets the most for his dollar," said John

Once the manure is stored the next important step is to properly spread the manure During the winter months more manure is typically spread on fields near the barn. In the summer, a few fields are left ideal for spreading manure. This can result in the fertilizer value being wasted and even creating possible problems Increased plant stress, lodging, disease and insect problems are just a few of the problems

Penn State agronomist Doug Beegle recently reported that 40 percent of soil samples tested showed excessive amounts of phosphorous and potassium.

Applying manure evenly over cropped fields will redistribute nutrients. Approximately 75 percent of the nutrients taken up by plants are returned in the manure. John said, "SCS personnel will develop a spreading plan with the farmer. The plan is based upon the amount and type of manure, crops raised, acres available, and size of equipment used to spread manure."

By properly handling manure, less complaints will be received about odor from surrounding neighbors Also manure will not runoff, thus improving water quality of the watershed.

As farmers strive to improve their overall operations John Metrick urges farmers to look specifically at manure and it's potential not it's problems

John recommends that anyone having any questions or wanting assistance in developing a manure management system should contact him at the Pottsville Field Office. The office is located in the Fairlane Village Mall The telephone number 429-2343

Fertilizing in tough times

By Alton Homan
Bradford Co. Extension Agent

TOWANDA - Farmers are taking a serious look at all their crop management practices for 1986 And well they should, with record crop yields, huge carryover supplies, and disaster level prices this fall

The farm sector of our economy has borne a major burden as a result of national economic policies, as well as international trade policies and surpluses of major farm commodities

Some keys to farming success may well be 1 fine tuning financial management, 2 top profit yields on all planted acres, and 3 careful use of government programs In a nutshell, sharp managers will not just cut costs without realizing production and profit may be cut as well Such items as high quality seed, crop protection materials, and optimum fertilizer rates should be maintained An across-the-board cut of inputs would lower your individual yields and raise your cost per ton

Some farmers ask, "I didn't seem to get hurt by fertilizer cutbacks in 1985, can I do it again in 1986?" At this point I'd have to say, don't push your luck Timely planting and adequate rain helped make 1985 a good growing season Yields may have been higher if fertilizer rates were higher These higher crop yields may have been reduced built up soil fertility enough to drastically reduce yields if fertilizer rates are cut again Weather may not cooperate as well in 1986 The best guide, of course, is to soil test to determine residual levels, especially if the field is frequently manured

Another aspect is a similar question such as, "Can I afford much fertilizer with $2 corn"? My assessment is yes! Grain prices have a less than usually expected effect on optimum fertlizer rates for maximum economic yields A study shows that the optimum nitrogen rate drops only 9 lbs /acre with 15/lb nitrogen (like anhydrous ammonia), 22 lbs /acre with .30/lb. nitrogen when corn prices drop from $3 to $2.

Even if you feel you lost money with $2 corn, you'll lose less if you shoot for the lowest cost per bushel or ton

You need to realize that maximum economic yeilds don't guarantee profitable production Perhaps it would be better for a dairyman or livestock producer with a low crop production capability or small livestock unit to purchase corn

Another point of view may be necessary before planting next year, that of your lender if money needs to be borrowed A smart lender avoids the "we'll give you only $10,000 for 1986 approach" Progressive lenders will loan whatever it takes to produce crops at the lowest cost per bushel or ton As a result, you avoid "saving" that last $1,000 of fertilizer which may cut yields by $4,000

But planning the fertility program is a crucial part of a high profit farming operation Approach it by analyzing 1 soil test level, 2 prior crop removal, 3 soil residual goal, 4 crop production goal

One question in the past has been, "How do I get my lender to listen"? One way is a good set of accurate records. A request for money to purchase planting needs simply by stating you need money to get your planting done may not suffice Go to your lender to tell him 1 why you want the money, 2 how you are going to use it, 3 how and when you're going to pay it back, 4 what you'll do if something goes wrong with the base plan

If you have been a member of the 5 Acre Corn of the Alfalfa Growers program, you already may have all the proof you need with itemized expenses, yields and profits Also, if you are a member of a Crop Management Association, records could easily support your request for a loan

Remember, if the decision has been made to plant in 1986, input cost cutting could reduce profits or increase losses. Few farmers doubled fertilizer rates when prices went up, so think twice about cutting them in half when prices are down

HALL, NY – Seedway, Inc. announces the introduction of Todd 7800, a main season single cross hybrid corn variety, adapted to 116 day or 2600 growing degree day areas, of the northeastern United States. Todd 7800 is a result of the most recent technology in hybrid corn development. The company has evaluated the new hybrid over several growing seasons at several locations, and found the new variety a consistently high yielder with good standability.

Todd 7800 was selected as the comparison hybrid for research strip trials conducted at 12 sites throughout MD, PA, NJ, and NY by Seedway. These large scale machine planted and harvested trials compare new introductions with commercially available industry leaders, and new material not yet released by the company. 7800 was planted at locations appropriate to its maturity. It outyielded all competitive hybrids with yields up to 183 bu./acre and average harvest moisture of 25.7 percent. Stalk breakage averaged less than 4 percent at sites in Fruitland, MD, Ridgley, MD, and Buckingham, PA.

Introductory quantities of seed were available to Seedway dealers during the past growing season, where it was planted in 10 dealer corn demonstration plots. 7800 averaged 164.2 in bu./acre over the ten sites. Good standability and consistently high yields recommend it to northeast corn growers.

Presenting — Jonathon Merkle, Pennsylvania Goat Association's Youth Representative

BY SALLY DUNMIRE
Staff Correspondent

WARRIORS MARK — It's hard to imagine how the Pennsylvania Dairy Goat Association could have found a better 1985-'86 Youth Representative than Jonathon Merkle.

As he promotes the industry throughout the state this year, Jonathon, the son of Charles and Delores Merkle of Sinking Springs Farm, will be able to speak from experience.

In both 1984 and 1985, his goats had the highest DHIA rolling herd average in Pennsylvania, with an average 3372 pounds of milk and 132 pounds of fat.

"That's very good for dairy goats," Jonathon explained, adding that his best animals were brough in from California, where dairy goats are popular.

And he's continued his emphasis on herd development by concentrating on genetics.

"Through selective breeding, stressing milk production," he said, "I've steadily increased my herd's average."

Originally from California, the Merkles moved to Warriors Mark when Charles accepted a teaching position at Penn State University. But it was in California that Jonathon discovered his interest in dairy goats . . . and won the foundation dam and top producer for his herd in a raffle at a 4-H dairy goat training conference.

That animal, an 8-year-old Alpina named Mira Monte Mary had a 1985 DHIA record of 4,370 pounds of milk with 162 pounds of fat.

And with his selective breeding program, Jonathon is looking for even greater performances from Mary's daughters.

"Her daughters are well on their way to surpassing her record," he said. "I keep working to breed better and better animals."

Jonathon got his start with dairy goats at the tender age of 11, when his family bought a goat to provide milk and cheese for their table. Wanting a goat of his own, he paid to have the family doe bred.

This first experiment in genetics proved to be a mixed blessing, as the doe had triplets. . . but died the next day.

Then, to complicate matters, just a few days later Jonathon won Mary in the 4-H calf raffle.

At this point, the Merkles had four kids and no milk. So they bought one doe and rented a second to feed the motherless offspring.

As a result, the Merkles became owners of a goat herd almost overnight. And the herd has been on the increase ever since.

At present, Jonathon's herd includes five bred does due to freshen this spring, two high quality bucks proven to breed top milkers, and six bred does. Most of these goats are black and white Alpines with a few white Saanes. These animals produce between nine and 16 pounds of milk per animal per day.

What does the family do with all that milk?

"We drink some," said Jonathon. "It tastes just like raw cow's milk . . . it's naturally homogenized and easier to digest. Occasionally, Mom makes cheese, and the rest goes to feed our veal calves and market hogs."

Other animals on the farm include market Suffolk lambs, which are raised mostly for meat. The wool is sold to local spinners and weavers. They also raise two beef steers and Jonathon owns a registered Holstein cow that resides on another farm.

"We might not be saving any money, producing our meat and milk this way, but the quality and quanity are hard to beat. We eat real well. Our DHIA records say that we are making money though," added Jonathon's mother, Delores.

Jonathon and Delores divide the twice-a-day milking duties. Delores does the morning milking, with Jonathon taking the evening shift. In the spring, after freshening, the does must be milked three times daily.

"We have two milking stalls, where we milk by hand into stainless steel buckets. I can milk out a doe in two or three minutes, which is as quick as the electric milker, so we don't use it. It takes an extra hour to clean the milker up, so actually we save time milking by hand," Jonathon stated.

The goats are fed oats, and a feed mill mix of corn, soybeans and vitamins. Loose minerals and baking soda are offered free choice. "The baking soda helps raise the butterfat content by neutralizing stomach acids," Jonathon explained.

"We don't sell our goat milk, even though raw milk permits are available. For one thing, the permits are expensive and the parlor requirements are very stringent," said Delores. "It would be quite expensive to upgrade our building to meet these standards. Nobody could afford to buy the milk.

"We did sell one of our goats to a family that needed goat milk for their two year-old son who was allergic to cow's milk. Once on goat's milk, he gained weight and was healthy again."

When Jonathon isn't busy with his goats or working with the other animals, he is a freshman at the Pennsylvania State University. Here this 18 year old is a biology major and plans to pursue a career in medical research.

In addition to raising good milking goats and attending college, he also works in time to attend a few shows.

"Last year, at the Big Weekend Show, held in Huntingdon, I won Grand Champion Alpine in the Youth Show and Reserve Grand Champion Saanens in the Youth and Open Show, out of 500 entries. It is a large goat show for the entire Eastern coast." Jonathon mentioned.

This year the Big Weekend will again be held at the Huntingdon Fairy Grounds on June 14 and 15, just in time for National Dairy Goat Awareness Week which runs from June 14 to June 21, 1986.

Jessica, Jonathon's sister, helps him with his top producer, Mira Monte Mary. In 1985 her DHIA record was 4,370 pounds of milk and 162 pounds of fat.

Jonathon feeds his goats, oats and a mix of corn, soybeans and vitamins. Loose minerals and baking soda are offered free choice.

Forklift designed for compact tractors

Automatic announces a new tractor fork lift, designed to work with compact tractors with as little as 20 H.P. The lift attaches to 3-point or other fast-hitches and operates from tractor hydraulics, lifts up to 2,000 lbs. to a height of 70 inches. A dump bucket is available as optional equipment to use in place of the forks for handling loose material. Either the lifting forks or the bucket can be used without the hydraulic mast for simple lift and move jobs. It's the perfect combination for working in restricted areas where bigger tractors cannot go. For further details contact the manufacturer, Automatic Equipment Mfg. Co., Department NR, Penden, Nebraska 68047, 402-385-3054, or the distributor, Ryder Supply, Box 219, Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, 17201, 717-263-9111.

Bedell says CCC loan delay 'kicks farmers in teeth'

WASHINGTON – U.S. Rep. Berkley Bedell, said that the Administration's procrastination in asking Congress for additional money for Commodity Credit Corporation loans to farmers is another example of this Administration trying to "kick farmers in the teeth."

"For the Administration to wait until they are completely out of funds, and three days before Congressional recess, before coming to Congress for emergency funds is another case of the complete lack of concern for the farm community. I wonder what they will find to do next," Bedell said.

The Commodity Credit Corporation notified its local offices that they could not make additional price-support loans to farmers because the money has ran out. President Reagan on Tuesday (Feb. 4) asked Congress for an additional $8 billion for the program, but the request was not made until after CCC was out of funds. Farmers coming to their local offices expecting to receive their check for their CCC loan are being told that the money is not available until additional funding is approved.

"This is just a disasterous situation," Bedell said. "If the Commodity Credit Corporation can't continue making loans, we effectively have no price support program. This problem could have been avoided if the Administration had made a responsible budget request in the first place. Since the Administration didn't do that, officials should have at least come to us in a reasonable amount of time to approve more funding before the money ran out."

The Appropriations subcommittee for agriculture was scheduled to meet Wednesday afternoon to consider the President's request for additional funds. It was not clear how long it would take for Congress to approve the money.

"I hope that we can move quickly," Bedell said. "I have talked with Jamie Whitten, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and urged that this matter become an immediate priority."

Maryland publishes export directory

ANNAPOLIS, MD. – Maryland firms processing and dealing in food and agricultural products are invited to list themselves and their product lines in a new export directory being compiled by the Marketing Services Section of the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

The listings will be at no charge to the firms according to Thomas L. Butler who is compiling the information.

The main purpose of the directory will be to assist in export trade efforts which are being stepped up by MDA and the Maryland Department of Economic and Community Development. Copies of the directory will be sent to the U.S. agricultural attaches stationed at our embassies around the world.

The directory will also be distributed at a number of international trade shows in the upcoming months.

Starting the ball rolling for a listing is easy. All it involves is a toll-free call to MDA at 1-800-638-2209. This line is answered automatically, 24 hours a day. When the tone sounds, the caller should give his firm's name, his name and a telephone number where he can be reached during regular business hours.

Mr. Butler will then contact the firm and take the listing information for the directory. Deadline for listing submissions is March 5th. For more information, contact Thomas Butler at (301) 841-5770.

diesels to repower your equipment

From Evergreen Engines

Evergreen Engines Company has been the distributor for John Deere diesel engines in Eastern Pennsylvania since 1979. During that period, we have repowered or replaced the engine in most models of machines manufactured by Deere, both agricultural and industrial.

We have been active in the OEM marketplace both in new equipment and repowering or replacing engines in used OEM equipment. We have worked with many different types of equipment, such as irrigation pumps, electric generators, conveyors, fire equipment, air compressors, and various construction and agricultural machines manufactured by companies other than Deere.

We try to maintain an inventory of 70 new engines on hand at all times, and pride ourselves on fast (usually 24 to 48 hours) delivery.

We maintain our own in-house fuel injection pump room and a complete parts inventory.

We now offer a generous core credit exchange on your old engine.

At Evergreen, we deliver....from application engineering to follow up service.

Give us the opportunity; we'll prove what we say.

Farm Bureau backs dairy assessment

TRENTON – The New Jersey Farm Bureau is urging Congress to amend a technical error in the 1986 Farm Bill which could have a devastating impact on New Jersey's $98 million vegetable industry by permitting unfair competition on set-aside acreage.

As it is currently written, a farmer could participate in a crop reduction program, reduce acreage by at least 8 per cent, and still receive 92 per cent of the crop support payment.

"However, a farmer in a crop reduction program would only have to plant half his acreage in the program crop," explains Walter Ellis, President of the New Jersey Farm Bureau. "Remaining acreage could be used for a non-program crop–which includes all vegetables, fruits, hay, oilseeds, dry beans and livestock."

Ellis said the provisions of the program would create an incentive for over-production of non-payment crops, and the glut on the market would bring low prices

"This would be unfair competition," Ellis said. "Producers receiving crop support payments should not be able to plant the 'underplanted' acreage in commercially harvested crops or for grazing "

Ellis said producers in the program who choose to reduce their program crops should be restricted to devoting the freed-up acreage to conservation.

Caroline County tops Maryland contest

COLLEGE PARK, Md. – Maryland's average corn yield fell from a record 118 bushels per acre in 1984 to 110 bushels per acre last year, according to the Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service.

But the average yield for 20 top participants in corn improvement programs sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service in seven Maryland counties far exceeded similar averages for any previous year.

Statewide winners were honored in several categories during last month's 79th annual meeting of the Maryland Crop Improvement Association, held Feb. 25 in the Tidewater Inn at Easton.

For the fifth consecutive year, the overall corn yield champion hailed from the Preston area of Caroline County on Maryland's central Eastern Shore. Names and faces this time were different, however.

All six of the top growers in the 1985 overall Maryland yield standings were participants in the Extension-sponsored Caroline County corn irrigation improvement program. Each had planted DeKalb hybrid corn, and all but one utilized center pivot irrigation.

The Taylor brothers–Claude and Wesley–edged out their Preston neighbor, William G. Greenage, who had been overall state champion corn grower in the four previous years. The brothers have been among the top five in overall statewide corn yield standings for three consecutive years.

The Taylors' winning corn yield for 1985 was 232.46 bushels per acre. They used DeKalb T1100 hybrid corn and center pivot irrigation, and they utilized heavy applications of chicken manure to help reduce the amount of commercial fertilizer which otherwise would have been needed.

William G. Greenage and his son, Billy, placed second in the overall statewide corn yield standings for 1985 with 230.29 bushels per acre. The Greenage duo used DeKalb 689 hybrid corn and center pivot irrigation.

Operator of Beechwood Farms at Preston, William Greenage holds the all-time official Maryland corn yield record of 244.8 bushels per acre, set in 1981.

Dr. V. Allan Bandel (right), Extension soils specialist at the University of Maryland, congratulates the Taylor brothers--Claude (left) and Wesley--of Preston on having the highest yield in the 1985 Caroline County irrigation corn improvement program.

W. Sherman Councell III of Goldsboro placed third in the overall statewide standings with a yield of 244.0 bushels per acre. During last month's annual meeting of the Maryland Crop Improvement Association, he received a plaque from the Chevron Chemical Company for the highest irrigated corn yield in the state grown under no-till cultural methods.

In addition to their winning yield, the Taylor brothers of Preston had a field near Friendship which produced 221.1 bushels per acre. That was good enough for fourth place in the overall statewide standings.

Baltimore County made a strong showing in the non-irrigated corn yield category for 1985, with two growers surpassing the previous state record in this realm.

Harry Hubble of White Hall was seventh in the overall standings with a yield of 216.01 bushels per acre. His Pioneer, 3358 hybrid corn was planted in alfalfa sod in 38-inch rows on April 27 using the no-till method. He qualified for a first-place plaque from Chevron in the non-irrigated, no-till category.

Hubble's yield broke the previous state record for non-irrigated corn set only last year by Edward Hancock of Snow Hill (Worcester County). Hancock's 1984 yield of 212.11 bushels per acre broke an old record which had stood since 1965.

Average yield for the top 20 growers in the 1985 official Maryland corn contest was 213.60 bushels per acre. This compares with a "top 15" average of 201.32 bushels per acre in 1984; 195.91 in 1983; 198.73 in 1982; 192.6 in 1981, and 167.11 in 1980.

Maryland's statewide average corn yield of 110 bushels per acre last year was second only to the record of 118 bushels per acre set in 1984, according to the Crop Reporting Service. The previous all-time high was 107 bushels per acre in 1982.

The official state corn yield contest has been conducted each year since 1952 as part of the crop improvement program of the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service.

USDA ups fee for meat grading, certification

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Effective March 31, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will adopt the requirements of the 1985 edition of the National Bureau of Standards' Handbook 44, "Specifications, Tolerences, and Other Technical Requirements for Weighing and Measuring Devices," for grain weighing equipment, Kenneth A. Gilles, administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service, said recently.

Gilles said the adoption of Handbook 44 will provide regulatory relief, simplify regulations and achieve national uniformity for devices used for official weighing.

Handbook 44 requirements include tolerances, classing systems and other criteria applicable to official grain weighing equipment. However, FGIS excluded those requirements for coupled-in-motion weighing because of its relative inaccuracy. Coupled-in-motion weighing is a system used to determine the weight of an entire trainload of grain without uncoupling the cars.

FGIS also revised the tolerances for scales, near-infrared (NIR) analyzers, and Kjeldahl analyzers to update the regulations to reflect current commercial standards, and incorporated by reference NBS Handbook 105-1, "Specifications and Tolerances for Field Standard Weights." Gilles said FGIS will continue to work with the National Conference on Weights and Measures to develop moisture meter requirements.

For further information, contact Lewis Lebakken, Jr., Information Resources Management Staff, Room 0667, FGIS, USDA, Washington, D.C. Telephone (202) 382-1738.

Pennsylvania on Parade set for March 27-29

STATE COLLEGE – The Pennsylvania Holstein Association is making final preparations for the annual Pennsylvania on Parade Sale and Show. This will be held at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg on March 27 to March 29.

The show commences on Thursday, March 29, at 8:30. The judge for this event is Richard Keene, Gilbertsville, NY. This show is part one, of the three shows which the All-Pennsylvania Awards will again be based on.

The annual sale starts the next day. Approximately 120 calves and 100 bred heifers and young cows will be sold.

Every top bull in the country will be represented. Older, highly regarded bulls, such as Ivanhoe, Elevation, Astronaut and Monitor, will also be represented.

Twent-five daughters of Chairman will be offered to the discriminating buyer. Valiant and Morris Tony have 15 entries included in the sale. Buyers will also be able to select from numerous daughters of Chief Stewart, Rotate, and Bell. Tradition, Mars and Spirit offsprings will also be paraded for the prospective buyer.

On the other side of the pedigree, over 65 percent of these outstanding offspring are out of Very Good and Excellent dams.

The maternal side of the pedigree also has production plus. Well over half of the consignments have in excess of 20,000 pounds of milk and some as high as 30,000 pounds on the dam's side.

This state show and sale features consignments solely from Pennsylvania. Buyers are expected from across the country however, as in previous years.

Lehigh extension head retires

UNIVERSITY PARK – Betty M. Heinbach, Lehigh County Extension Director and home economist, retired earlier this month after 31 years of service with The Pennsylvania State University's Cooperative Extension Service

A native of Pine Grove, Schuylkill County, she joined the Franklin County Extension staff in 1954, working closely with county 4-H programs as well as family living educational programs She moved to the Lehigh County Extension office two years later, where her expertise in home canning and food preservation strengthened the many programs she coordinated throughout the years

Heinbach developed programs in health and nutrition, home financial management and family relations. Since 1969 she supervised the Expanded Foods and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP), a USDA program aimed at families with limited resources She directed four nutrition aides who assisted the EFNEP families in making efficient use of their resources to provide nutritious meals.

Heinbach was twice honored by the National Association of Extension Home Economists She received the eastern regional Florence Hall Award in 1960, becoming the first Pennsylvania Extension agent to receive this honor for professional improvement in home economics Seven years later she was recognized for her outstanding educational programs with the Distinguished Service Award

She has been active in both the Pennsylvania and National Associations of Extension Home Economists, serving as president of the Pennsylvania association and on various committees She also is a member of Epsilon Sigma Phi, a national honorary extension fraternity

Robert Leiby, Lehigh County agricultural agent, has assumed the duties of County Extension Director since Heinbach's retirement

PFA testifies on mushrooms

WASHINGTON – The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) testified before the Subcommittee on Trade of the U S House Ways and Means Committee in support of legislation to benefit domestic mushroom growers

PFA spokesman, James Yeatman, a mushroom farmer from Avondale, told the subcommittee that PFA supports H R 839 introduced by Congressman Richard Schulze (R—Malvern) The legislation would require imported preserved mushrooms to be labeled in English as to the country where they were grown Present law only requires identification of the nation of last processing

Yeatman explained, "A problem arises when imports of canned mushrooms preserved in heavy salt solutions enter this country in large containers Upon arrival in the United States, these mushrooms are washed and conventionally processed and packaged by domestic firms The labels on these packages of preserved mushrooms bear the identification of the United States rather than the country where the mushrooms were grown."

Yeatman told the subcommittee, "The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association strongly believes that labels on preserved mushrooms should allow consumers to easily distinguish high quality American mushrooms from imports Anything less than a strict labeling standard represents a breach of trust between American producers and consumers "

He added, "This concept is so basic that voting delegates at our organization's recent annual meeting adopted policy that would require all imported agricultural products to be labeled as to the country of origin Without such a provision, our industry has no defense against imports that appear to be domestically grown "

There were 46,000 Pennsylvania farmers who had cattle and 21,000 operations with milk cows during 1985.

Beef cows, at 33.6 million, are five percent below January 1, 1985, the lowest since 1966. Milk cows, at 11.2 million, are up three percent from January 1, 1985 and the highest since 1975.

Other class estimates on January 1, and the changes from last year and two years ago, respectively, are as follows· All heifers 500 pounds and over 18 0 million down, two percent and three percent Beef replacement heifers, 5.15 million, down seven percent and 17 percent Milk replacement heifers, 4.76 million, virtually unchanged and up five percent Other heifers, 8 09 million, up fractionally and up three percent Steers weighing 500 pounds and over, 16.0 million, down two percent from both years Bulls weighing 500 pounds and over, 2.26 million, down six percent and 11 percent. Calves under 500 pounds, 24.4 million, down eight percent and 12 percent. All cattle and calves on feed January 1 for slaughter, 11 4 million, down eight percent and two percent.

The 1985 calf crop is estimated at 41.0 million, down three percent from 1984, down seven percent from 1983 and is the lowest since 1961 This calf crop is down fractionally from the expected calf crop published last July Calves born during the first half of the year were estimated at 71 5 percent of the annual total.

Meat imports below quota trigger

WASHINGTON — The U S Department of Agriculture has announced that the first quarterly estimate of U.S. meat imports for 1986 is below the level that would require quotas on imports under the Meat Import Act of 1979.

Bentley said that based on USDA estimates of available supplies, imports of beef and certain other meats should be no more than 1,300 million pounds-about 140 million pounds below the 1986 trigger level of 1,440 million pounds.

The Meat Import Act requires the President to restrict imports of certain meats — primarily beef and veal — if the USDA estimate equals or exceeds the trigger level

"Based on today's estimate, there is no need to impose import restrictions during the quarter beginning January 1," Bentley said. "Our analysis of conditions in this country and abroad affecting meat imports strongly suggests there will be no need for import restrictions for the remainder of the year."

Imports of meat subject to the law — by month — are·

USDA okays change in acreage totals

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Agriculture will permit producers of insured fall-planted crops to file amended acreage reports showing new harvesting intentions revised because of recent changes in USDA commodity programs.

"Farmers should not be forced to pay a premium on a crop they may have to destroy in order to participate in the government's commodity programs," said Merritt W. Sprague, manager of USDA's Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. "FCIC wants to be responsive to producers' needs for careful planning, so we are pleased to make this opportunity available."

Sprague said producers of fall-planted crops who intend to file amended acreage reports should contact their crop insurance agents as soon as possible, and that the producers must submit appropriate forms to their agents by March 21.

Sprague also said that USDA will have made all commodity program announcements critical to producer intentions before March 21.

"We hope that producers will act promptly to make their decisions known to their crop insurance agents so that FCIC can process the considerable paperwork expected in a timely manner," Sprague said.

Producers look to expanding specialty foods market

BY DONNA McCONAUGHEY TRUESDELL
Staff Correspondent

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Speciality foods — a market who's time has come. That was the conclusion drawn from the "Spotlight on Specialty Foods" workshop conducted as part of New Hampshire's annual Farm and Forest Expo.

The New Hampshire Department of Agriculture is looking at the production of speciality foods as a new aspect of the agricultural industry. Other states in New England have encouraged producers to organize and learn from each other as they pursue this expanding marketplace.

The popularity of specialty foods has developed as the prominence of regional cooking has expanded. Particularly strong is the demand for foods that emphasize native traditions. Between two and three billion dollars were spent across the nation last year in specialty foods sales.

If agriculture responds to this interest, a new opportunity for profit may be found. Specialty foods have achieved a 20 percent growth rate in the past year and the demand continues to rise. By pursuing this market, agriculture will be responding to the urban demand.

The significance of food in one's life is changing today. "Currently the food one eats is a statement reflecting one's personality", says Lynda Brushett of Niche Marketing. "Homemade, real food is important," she notes. People today want the old-fashioned, homestyle foods that were expected in the past. However, most people don't have the time to prepare them so they are willing to pay for these items.

In fact, serving homemade, real food is a sign of affluence today. By adapting this philosophy, Americans have established affluent living without true affluence via the foods they eat and serve.

These changes represent a potential and virtually untapped market for the agricultural industry. People want to go back to the farm, the place the crop was produced and buy a producer-finished product.

Many city dwellers can not get to the producer, so they turn to a store that specializes in this old-fashioned, homestyle type of product. Ron King, proprietor of Anthron's Fine Food Market in Concord, NH, strives to offer just this service. His store is very successful despite the prices of his foods, which are much higher than those in the typical grocery store.

During the workshop, Ron spoke with producers about how to produce a market specialty foods from a retailer's point of view. He provided a practical list of requirements that must be met to produce a successful product.

The quality of the product is the first priority. Ron tastes everything he sells. He believes there is a "homemade taste" that is easily recognized. He recommends using only high quality ingredients which will increase the quality of the taste. Because taste is so important, only Ron purchases products which the producer will provide samples of.

Price is important since it must be appropriate to the product and its quality. However, people will pay more for a higher quality product.

The way the product is presented can influence its success. The labeling should be easy to read and still allow view of the product Colorful, attractive graphics on a label can improve it also. Packaging must be designed in such a way as to present the food in an appetizing manner.

In addition to the product itself, other aspects are analyzed. Is there a reliable supply of the product? Have the production facilities met any state inspection and licensing requirements?

Another strong point is if the producer is willing to get involved in marketing the product. This may be done by providing point of sale brochures and information on how to prepare the product and serve it.

Providing extra amounts of the product to be used for sampling in the store will help in selling the item. If the location permits, it is even better to go to the store and pass out samples. This provides an opportunity to meet and educate the public and hopefully sell them on the specialty food.

Ron King emphasizes that some extra time must be invested in the beginning to establish markets. By working with retailers and assisting them in promoting the product, both retailer and producer will benefit.

Another way to market specialty foods is through mail-order catalogs. Lawson Hill, author of How to Build a Millionaire Mail-Order Business From Someone Who Did, addressed the keys to producing a successful catalog. He recommended designing the catalog to give the best product the best exposure. This is often on the front cover. In fact, the cover will sell three times more than anything inside the catalog, claims Lawson.

Good eye flow and ease of reading is important in the designing of a catalog. If a "Z" pattern is followed with the most important items lying in that pattern and a high contrast or large size picture or image is in the upper left corner of the page, it will be easiest to read and will attract more interest.

Lawson recommends telling about your business near the front of the catalog. He believes this, along with "sincere, meaningful, good strong copy" throughout the catalog will keep people in it.

Mail order trade in specialty foods is a very attractive opportunity, but it takes much hard work. Mike Satzow of Claremont, New Hampshire's North Country Smokehouse, says there are big startup costs in advertising and developing mailing lists. He believes it takes about five years for a catalog effort to pay off.

Lawson Hill suggests a minimum three year plan of profit, loss, and cash flow projections prior to attempting production of a catalog to determine whether it would be a wise financial move in the production of specialty foods.

As with any business, financial management in the production of specialty foods can be critical to its success as is the quality of the product produced. A business plan is the first step in this process. This plan should include the purpose of the business and its goals as well as financial data

Michelle Sweet, business analyst for the University of New Hampshire Small Business Development Center, recommends taking advantage of programs offered by local Chamber of Commerce groups and small business organizations. She believes "if you fail to plan, you plan to fail" when starting a new business.

Sweet also offered these suggestions on how to get the product into a market. Call the company and get the name of the buyer who would handle the line that this product would fit into. Call the buyer and introduce yourself and ask if a sample may be sent. Send the sample and any information about the business or the product itself. Then followup and check the response to the product. If not accepted try again in three months asking if perhaps the company's strategies or needs have changed.

If this method is not effective, make friends with the secretary. Sweet has found that secretaries do influence decisions made in a business and can be a positive ally on your side.

Alan Parker, president of the Vermont Gourmet and Specialty Foods Association, suggested trade shows and food fairs as good methods of contacting retailers. However, the cost of participating in these can be as much as $2,500.

For beginning businesses, he suggested establishing key relationships with a few retailers so that the progress of the product can be observed. This also allows for changes to be made as necessary early in the process of marketing the food item.

Parker warns that the specialty foods industry is a "damnably trendy" business. He recommends watching the trends carefully, maintaining a high quality product

Carpenter says Reagan has 'no heart' for farmers

ST PAUL – "The President talks of hope for the future, for a rising America Firm of heart, united in spirit, powerful in pride and patriotism. But he has shown he has no heart for rural America and there can be no pride in his budget for rural communities," National Farmers Union President Cy Carpenter said.

In response to an 18 percent overall proposed cut for USDA in 1987 and total elimination of several vital programs for rural communities, Carpenter said Congress must ignore the President's budget proposal and instead fashion a budget that "serves the people they represent, instead of serving the political needs of those in the White House

"The President said it's time we reduced the federal budget and left the family budget alone That is a direct insult to farmers when you consider that the budget proposal directly increases farmer costs while jerking out from under them the safety net provided by Federal Crop Insurance, the Rural Electric Administration, and other programs," the family farm spokesman said

While comparisons to other federal agencies are not easily figured, the NFU official said it is unlikely any other agency is being asked to bear as much of the burden as USDA. Particularly devastating, he said, is the fact that improved farm income and emergency credit – rated as top priorities by family farmers nationwide – would be wiped out

"It is ludicrous to increase our spending on war machinery by 12 to 13 percent with inflation figured in, while eliminating all rural housing, Farmers Home Administration emergency loans and direct operating loans, the Rural Development Agency, and temporary food assistance, especially when new figures show that hunger is most concentrated in the rural areas of the Midwest," he said

Embargoes don't work, Congressman tells NCPC

MIAMI BEACH – Despite growing recognition that unilateral trade sanctions are not effective, the U.S. continues to apply them to try and achieve foreign policy goals, Rep. Don Bonker (D-WA) told the annual meeting of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives here

Because trade restrictions failed to affect the Soviet Union when former President Carter embargoed grain sales or when President Reagan tried to block supplies for a Soviet gas pipeline, he said, Congress has been trying to restrict the president's authority to impose them

Despite requirements of the 1985 Export Administration Act that the U S consult with Congress and other major trading nations before imposing economic sanctions, Bonker said President Reagan twice has ignored the need for consultations by citing his authority under other laws

The Washington congressman said European allies, who have declined to cooperate, were offended by the lack of consultation before the U S embargoed trade with Lybia And the trade cutoff with Nicaragua, he said, affected U S farmers because 80 percent of U.S. sales to that country were agricultural.

Bonker predicted that embargoes will not achieve their goals "unless other trading countries unanimously support the effort" The tragedy of past embargoes, he said, is that "the victim is not the intended target it is our own export industry" and being ready to adapt the product to consumer demands as necessary.

Despite potential problems, all speakers at the New Hampshire "Spotlight on Specialty Foods" workshop agreed that the specialty foods business is as yet a virtually untapped market whose time has come. It is one more avenue to be explored by the agricultural community involved in producing foods and ingredients for food products.

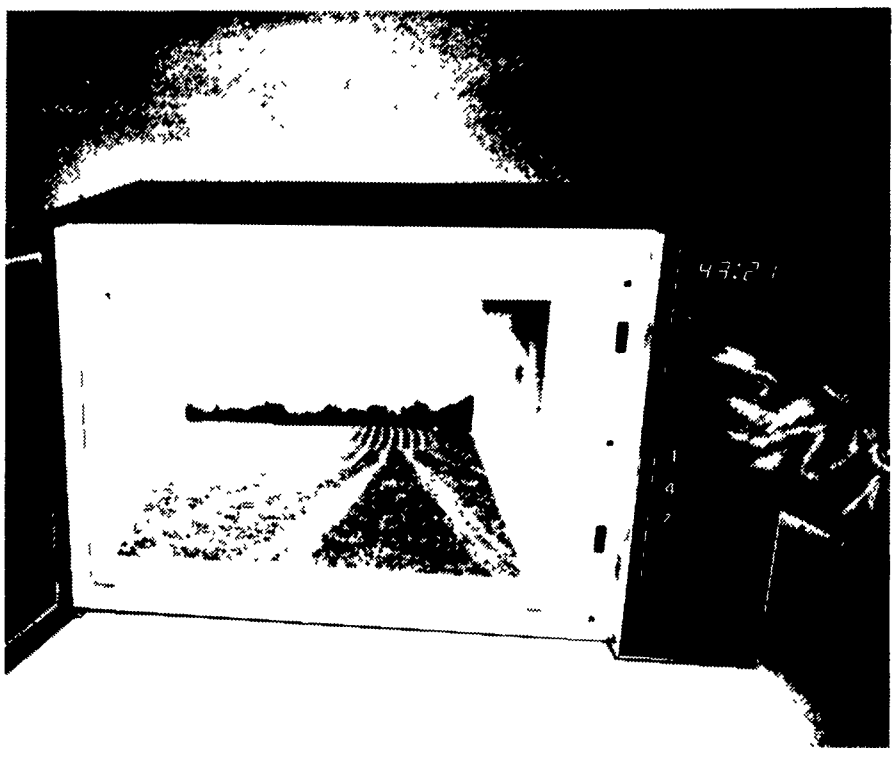
DEAL WITH THE LEADERS IN FORAGE PRE-SERVATIVE PRODUCTS
THE PERFECT COMBINATION... BEACON FAST DRY AND BEACON HAY PRE-SERV

Field-drying forage should be this easy.



The longer legume forage lies in windrows drying, the more it loses weight, protein, nutritious leafs, and digestibility.

That's money lost.

Dry it faster. With Beacon Fast-Dry Forage Conditioner.

You'll get better forage — and more of it — out of the field faster. You'll also reduce yellowing of new growth, crop loss, and damage to the forage by weather and equipment.

ALSO AVAILABLE:
* Beco-Lac - stabilized source of micro-organisms, the guaranteed live lacto bacillus silage preserve.
* Beacon Liquid and Dry Silage Preserve.
* Beacon Hay Pre-Serv.

GONE WITH THE WIND?

When leaves crumble and blow away, you're out protein and money.

Beacon Hay Pre-Serv can put an end to leaf shatter. Dryness can cause nutrients to blow away, disappear in the fields or on the wagon. That not only robs cows of the protein they need, it means you have to purchase more protein for your dairy ration.

With economical, easy-to-apply Hay Pre-Serv, you can cut at up to 25% moisture, and get less leaf shatter, more palatable hay, and 10% more of it! You can bale earlier in the day or later in the evening, and even on cloudy days when the hay is well above 18% moisture.

So start using Beacon Hay Pre-Serv and put an end to nutrients and proteins that are gone with the wind. Start saving today... see your Beacon Advisor or Beacon dealer.

WANTED:

Your Worthless Runts!

Do you... Have runts? Wean early? Have orphaned pigs? We're aiming to hunt down profit-robbing runts and turn 'em into good-doing hogs with new CRATE-MATE, "The Sow Replacer."

CRATE-MATE is scientifically blended to promote fast growth by actually helping the baby pig use the nutrients in the ration more efficiently. Try it for your runts and early weaned pigs. COUNTER Banded

Since 1975, tests by universities in the Corn Belt have shown COUNTER® systemic insecticide-nematicide to be the top performing corn soil insecticide COUNTER controls more major corn pests, with no known resistance, than any other corn soil insecticide on the market

COUNTER In-Furrow

For maximum performance from your insecticide, put it where it works hardest In the seed furrow That way, it can't be blown away during application, washed away by heavy rain, or deflected by crop residue And COUNTER is guaranteed seed-safe

COUNTER Versatility

Conventional or conservation-till Banded or in-furrow Whatever your corn production system, we recommend COUNTER because, quite simply, it protects your corn crop better than any other corn soil insecticide COUNTER banded. COUNTER in-furrow Your two best options for maximum performance
